FIELDING'S MODEL ATTRACTS INTERNATIONAL INTEREST

Dr. Tony Fielding of the Faculty of Education has been awarded an academic links grant by the British Council to visit the Universities of Exeter, Lancaster and London.

The grant will enable Dr. Fielding to further explore the practical implications of a theoretical model of teacher development which Fielding and a team of researchers in Australia and the UK has developed in order to create a basis for curriculum planning and teacher education.

The members of the UK side of this team are Dr. Ken Shaw, Senior Lecturer in Education, University of Exeter; Dr. David McNamara, Lecturer in Education, University of Lancaster; and Mr. Crispin Jones, Lecturer in Comparative Education, London University Institute of Education.

Other members of the team in Australia are Dr. Barry Sheehan, Senior Lecturer in Education, La Trobe University and recently appointed Director of the Melbourne State College; Dr. Colin Symes, Lecturer in Educational Philosophy at Brisbane College of Advanced Education and a recent PhD student of Dr. Fielding; and Dr. Darol Cavanagh of the University of Wollongong.

The results of the research on the model were published in the Australian Journal of Teacher Education (October 1983) and the whole issue was devoted to an exposition, and a critique, of the model. Fielding was guest editor of this issue.

The research was initiated by Fielding during his study leave in the UK in 1982. A great deal of interest was stimulated when the work was presented to the London Association of Comparative Educationists at London University in November 1982.

AVCC SAYS REDUCED REAL LEVEL OF FUNDING WILL CLOSE CAMPUS DOORS TO DISADVANTAGED

The Australian Vice-Chancellors' Committee has sent the following letter to all Federal Ministers.

"The Government has under consideration Volume 1 of the Report of the Commonwealth Tertiary Education Commission (CTEC) for the 1985-87 Triennium entitled "A Program for Growth" containing recommendations on funding guidelines for universities, colleges of advanced education and technical and further education institutions in the 1985-87 triennium. The funding proposals set out in the CTEC Report are described as the minimum necessary to sustain the Government's programs for increased participation and greater equity in higher education. The universities have responded to the Government's request to increase opportunities for school leavers, women and disadvantaged groups, and total enrolments in the university system - and indeed in most universities - have exceeded the planned student loads for the current 1982-84 triennium; as these students move into later years of their courses there will be increased pressures. The universities' response may have generated the mistaken belief that increased enrolment can be sustained indefinitely. This is not so. The decline in the real level of funding in recent years, as documented in the CTEC Report, has diminished the capacity to maintain its present student numbers and, indeed, has put at risk the quality of university education for those already in the system. Increased funding for operating costs, buildings and equipment is essential to maintain or improve participation and to make special provisions for increasing access for school leavers and other special groups.

The Australian Vice-Chancellors' Committee (AVCC) wishes to stress that unless the universities are provided with additional resources they will be forced to make reductions in first year enrolments in 1985. The more stringent entry requirements, and the anticipated increases in the numbers of students qualified for admission in that year will, regrettably, make entry to universities less rather than more open.

The AVCC believes that it is necessary to inform both the Government and the public of this in order to avoid creating unrealistic expectations."

1985 ENROLMENT DATES

The following dates for the 1985 enrolment period are proposed:

Re-enrolments — 20 - 26 January
New enrolments — 6 - 9 February

Enquiries to Harry Alla on ext. 3925 on re-enrolments and to Gary Ryan on ext. 3924 for new enrolments.

CAREER DEVELOPMENT AND SUPPORT FOR WOMEN IN NON TRADITIONAL AREAS

A workshop on Career Development for women students in the faculties of Engineering, Metallurgy, Science, Mathematics and Commerce will be held on August 1st, from 9.30 a.m. - 4.30 p.m. in the Union Common Room. All interested people are invited to attend, especially women students from the above areas.

The workshop will be informal and discussion oriented. Women will speak on the areas of female graduate employment, the importance of postgraduate qualifications and the anti-discrimination legislation. As well, professional female engineers and accountants employed in the field will share their experiences. It is hoped to follow up the issues arising from the workshop in an ongoing and constructive way - some options may be the setting up of further support networks or assertion and career development groups by the counselling centre.

The impetus for the workshop comes from both the commitment of the University to affirmative action to assisting female students and from concern arising from the pattern of female employment in the Australian labour market. The Australian labour market is highly segregated according to gender and there is little evidence of this segregation diminishing. In February, 1984, 64% of women workers were employed in only three occupational areas: clerical, sales and services, sport and recreation; mostly, at the levels of stenographers, typists, sales assistants, waitresses and cleaners. Women do comprise almost half of professional, technical and related workers; but over 75% are engaged in teaching and nursing. Even within industries where women predominate, men tend to occupy the higher level decision-making positions.

The decline in employment opportunities in the traditional female areas and the increasing substitution of technology in these areas means that in order to maintain a continuing and proportional level of female participation in the labour market, women must be encouraged to both reconsider their vocational choices and to develop themselves within their career areas.

In universities, females have certainly increased their participation in undergraduate courses but while more women are enrolling in the traditionally male dominated areas of engineering and commerce, for example; female enrolments in humanities are higher than ever. Due to the nature of the labour market, the unemployment rate for females (8%) is higher than for males (3.6%), (February, 1983).

Female students are under-represented in the higher degree areas and have a higher attrition rate. As postgraduate qualifications are becoming increasingly important in a wide range of careers and are pre-requisites to academic careers, the low level of female participation as postgraduate students represents a serious obstacle for women as well as a serious waste of talent for society generally.

The above factual material makes it imperative that women have access to relevant information about their future employment. The seminar on August 1st will provide a great deal of relevant information and chances to discuss it. Moreover, the experience of women who do decide to train and work in non traditional areas indicates that it can be a difficult choice. Such women may be confronted by both direct and indirect discrimination, feelings of isolation and high levels of anxiety engendered by pressure to perform well to prove their worth comparative to their male counterparts.

Beth Urwin from the Counselling Centre is co-ordinating the workshop. Further information can be obtained from her by phoning 270592. Again, all interested people and particularly women studying in the scientific, technical, commercial and mathematical areas are invited to attend.

ASSERTION TRAINING

Many women find that their interaction with others, both at work and in their personal lives, is a source of considerable stress and difficulty. To be able to express one's needs and opinions clearly while being aware of one's own rights and the rights of others is part of developing our own personal power.

To this end, an Assertion Training Group for women will be conducted at the University Counselling Centre by Beth Urwin. The group will operate probably one evening per week (although day time could also be possible) for 2 hours over 10 weeks. It will focus on:-

1. discriminating between non-assertive, assertive and aggressive behaviours,
2. identifying and developing a belief system of personal rights and the rights of others,
3. identifying the irrational thinking which often precedes unassertive behaviour, and
4. practising alternative assertive responses to problematic situations.

This particular group is open to any woman affiliated with the university.

Contact Beth Urwin at the Counselling Centre or by phoning 270592 if you wish to participate or would like further information.

Staff Changes and Movements

REBECCA ALBURY WILL TEACH NEW SOCIOLOGY COURSE

Rebecca Albury has just been appointed to a Lectureship in Sociology at the University of Wollongong from her former position as Tutor in Politics at Macquarie University. Ms. Albury grew up in the United States and obtained both a Bachelor's degree in Social Science and an MA in Political Science from Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. Her original academic training was in International Relations but her work has increasingly moved into research and teaching on the power relations associated with human reproduction. Ms. Albury has broadcast, spoken and published extensively on issues such as fertility control, abortion and the In Vitro Debate, women's health, sexism and feminist teaching. She is presently a Member of the Management Committee of the Redress Press Co-operative, Sydney, and has been a Member of the Editorial Collectives for the journals 'Scarlet Women' and the 'Journal of Australian Political Economy', as well as a Member of the Board of Directors of the NSW Family Planning Association.

"Being or Doing: Women in Society" is the topic for the Sociology course, SOC242 "Contemporary Issues in Society", to be offered in Session II this year. Rebecca Albury describes the content this way:

"For many years women have been defined by their role in human reproduction, as mothers, and men defined by their role in the economy, as workers. Home life and public life seemed to be quite different. The women's movement of the past 15 years has again raised serious objections to those old definitions and to the social order that is based on them. Questions about work and human reproduction continue to be central to political debates about the roles of women and men in society. We will examine some of those questions with special focus on 'in vitro' fertilisation and affirmative action."

The course is open to any student who has completed Sociology I. Readers interested in enrolling, should do so early as we can only take a limited number of students.

International News

The Scuola di Lingua e Cultura Italiana per Stranieri in Siena, Italy aims at spreading knowledge of the Italian language and of Italian culture in all of its past and present forms: literature, art, history, scientific and philosophical thought, ethnic traditions, political and socio-economic institutions.

The school promotes cultural relations on both a national and international level, with Universities, Cultural and Research Societies and Institutions, and at the same time benefits from the collaboration of cultural and scientific attachés abroad as well as other Italian Institutions abroad.

In order to achieve its objectives the school provides a propaedeutic period of Italian language and Culture and advanced courses in: language, Italian literature and philosophy; history of art and ethnic traditions, political and economic history and Italian institutions.

Students of all nationalities are allowed to attend the courses in Italian language and culture provided they are in possession of a certificate which permits them to attend University in the Country in which the certificate was awarded. The school is open all year round and organises ordinary and special courses.

Plans are currently being made to commemorate Jean Francois Galaup de La Perouse at his birthplace in the French town of Albi. Proposals include an international symposium on the Pacific at the time of La Perouse with special reference to the social, cultural, scientific and medical aspects of his voyage of discovery. Organisers are particularly interested to have Australian participants at the symposium which is scheduled to be held in March-April 1985.

To assist the symposium organisers in assessing the level of Australian interest in the symposium, interested persons should contact the AVCC as soon as possible.
