SCOPE FOR IMPROVEMENT IN CTEC-SAYS AVCC

The Australian Vice-Chancellor's Committee has commented on the changes in the structure of the Commonwealth Tertiary Education Commission and on the arrangements for co-ordination and consultation with States and institutions. The full text of the comment is shown below.

Structure

It is essential in considering any reorganisation of the structure of CTEC that the distinctive role of universities continues to be recognised and that, in addition, there is adequate provision for considering the special needs of the colleges of advanced education. The AVCC therefore supports the retention of a Universities Council because of its value in maintaining its direct interaction with the universities and its specialist understanding of the sector. Similarly, our recognition of the distinctive nature of the work of the college sector leads us to argue for the retention of a separate specialist Advanced Education Council; and this argument is, we believe, strengthened by the heterogeneity of the CAE sector and the sheer number of the colleges of advanced education.

There is scope, however, for improvement in the interaction between the Universities Council and the Commission. The AVCC believes that the Council should become more advisory, and deliver its advice to the Commission in relatively brief reports and memoranda, rather than in large reports as at present. Because the advice comes from a body with specialist understanding of the sector, it should continue to be published but as an Appendix to the CTEC Report.

The number of part-time commissioners on the Commission should be increased from five to six and, of the six, three should be persons who have worked at senior level in the sectors to provide a balance between expert and lay representation. If this is accepted, the number of members on the Universities Council (and presumably other Councils) should be reviewed, and the AVCC would support a reduction from eight to six. Consideration should also be given to increased cross-representation between the Councils and the Commission. This might involve the full-time commissioner from each of the sectors serving on the Commission and three part-time lay members serving on both a Council and the Commission. It is felt that this might assist the full-time Commissioner in presenting the advice from the Council to the Commission.

It is evident from the AVCC's dealings with the Commission that its internal operation is fragmented. There are six Branches, one for each of the sectors and three serving the Commission itself. Not only does this lead to a duplication of activity with each of the sector Branches, and a Branch of the Commission sometimes dealing with the same issue, but often it is not clear which officer is the appropriate person to contact on a particular issue. Consideration might therefore be given to unifying the Commission's secretariat.

Procedures

The AVCC is greatly concerned about the increasingly interventionist nature of the Guidelines and of CTEC itself in the day-to-day operations of institutions. It hopes that it might be possible to find a way to offer clear guidance to institutions about Government policies and the expectations of the Commission, without there being money-tied directions. The AVCC believes that it is essential that the Commission has an opportunity to advise the Government in Volume I of its Report for a triennium before the preparation of the Guidelines. If the Government was to issue Guidelines without having taken advice from CTEC, the AVCC believes that the Commission's credibility would be undermined and it would cease to be seen as an effective link between Government and the tertiary education institutions. It would also, of course, lose much of its capacity for providing independent advice to Government, a valuable feature of its present work.

The AVCC can understand your concern that the present processes might encourage "ambit claims" from the institutions and Councils although it believes that universities have generally been responsible in their submissions and that the Reports of the Universities Council have contained a realistic assessment of the universities' needs. Nevertheless, if the Councils become more advisory, any temptation to make their reports too expansive would be greatly diminished. Institutions' submissions might be improved if visits by the Universities Council were not tied to the submissions but took place at any time during a triennium. Indeed, the Universities Council might assume a joint planning responsibility with the universities and, in the course of its visits to the institutions, might help to develop the submissions. This would assist the universities in framing their submissions and the Council in framing its advice to CTEC.

State Co-ordinating Bodies

The AVCC does not believe that there is a need for universities to be involved formally with State co-ordinating bodies. The universities comprise a national system which in turn is part of an international community, unlike institutions in the other sectors of tertiary education. Further, the Committee notes that there is a diversity of approach between States to the role of co-ordinating bodies in regard to universities. In one State it is the responsibility of the co-ordinating body to advise on colleges of advanced education only.

The AVCC nevertheless acknowledges that there must be some State input to CTEC in regard to higher education opportunity within the State. If this input is to be formalised in some way, it strongly believes that it should be limited to planning for enrolments in other than higher degree courses and that State co-ordinating bodies should not have any role in the implementation by either universities or colleges of advanced education of the decisions taken by the Australian Government on the advice of CTEC.

New Teaching Developments

The AVCC supports the views expressed in regard to new teaching developments. New expensive schools such as those of medicine, engineering, etc. will clearly continue to need CTEC support and special funding before they can be introduced. As far as new teaching developments arising from the extension of existing activities are concerned, these can be controlled, as suggested, "by broad money and numbers constraints, subject to regular supporting arrangements".

NEW APPOINTMENT TO HUMAN MOVEMENT

Dr. John Gross (pictured) has been appointed as a lecturer in sport psychology. The University of Wollongong has provided what appears to be the first programme to integrate sports studies with psychology studies to train specialised sport psychologists at the undergraduate level. Furthermore, with the advent of the Australian Sports Commission's Sports Research Grants graduate students in the area can expect to be involved in applied research studies.

Current research projects include the relationship between coaching behaviours and team performance particularly in the basketball area. Other interests include investigating the usefulness of modified rules in childrens sports to promote long-term sports involvement, and the role of perception in sport.

Dr. Gross was born in Auckland in 1946. His qualifications include Trained Teachers Certificate in Primary Education (NZ), 1972; Diploma of Physical Education, University of Otago (NZ), 1976; Master of Science in Kinesiology, University of Waterloo, 1978; Ph.D in Sport Psychology, University of Iowa, 1982. Member of the Australian Psychological Society (MAPsS).

Dr. Gross previously lectured in the Centre for Sports Studies at the Canberra College of Advanced Education. He conducted research with the Australian Institute of Sport Basketball team and the Canberra Cannons professional Basketball Teams.

EDUCATION LECTURER AT EAST-WEST CENTRE

Dr. Ted Booth of the Faculty of Education was a Research Associate in the Pacific Island Development Programme at the East-West Centre in Honolulu as part of his professional development leave at the end of 1984. While at the Centre he completed a concept paper on high level technical and human resource development in the Pacific. The paper was in response to needs expressed by Pacific Heads of Government who guide the work of the Pacific Island Development Programme at the East-West Centre.

The writing, editing and issuing of media releases is the responsibility of the Publications and Information unit, unless copy is supplied direct from the Vice-Chancellor, Deputy Vice-Chancellor, Director or University Secretary. From time to time some Academic Units may feel the necessity to issue their own publicity material. If this is done then it would be appreciated if a copy could be sent to Gillian Curtis, Miranda Baker or Marilyn Johnson of Publications and Information, as enquiries are quite often directed there. Please phone 3926 or 3916 if you have any questions about media liaison.

CHIPMAN TO HEAD GENERAL STUDIES

General Studies is now the Centre for Interdisciplinary Studies and the Co-ordinator is Professor Lauchlan Chipman.

THE UNIVERSITY OF WOLLONGONG CLUB

The committee of the Club held its first meeting for the year on Friday, 1st February. Lunches commenced on Tuesday 12th February, between 12 p.m. and 2 p.m. and lunch will be available on every Tuesday and Thursday during February. The cost will be $6.50 and this will include an excellent main meal, sweets and tea/coffee. The meal will be of the same high quality that was provided last year. When you consider that elsewhere a cup of tea or coffee alone costs 60c/70c per cup, the cost of lunch is very reasonable. We hope to introduce a third day for lunch, on a trial basis, starting in March, and this will be a Monday.

A General Meeting/Social Function will be held in the Club premises on Friday 22nd March, 1985, starting at 7.30 p.m. Cost $10.00 per head and b.y.o. Wives, husbands and friends welcome. All members requested to attend, the meeting will be a short one, but we need your support.

OBITUARY

VALE BESSY FOSKETT

Bessy Foskett's funeral was held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on 14 February 1985.

Bessy was one of the founders of the University who worked hard in 1959-61 for the establishment of the University College which in those days was a college of the University of New South Wales. She will be sadly missed by her many campus friends, five of whom attended the funeral.

She will also be missed by music lovers in this City as she was also a founder of the Conservatorium of Music and the Wollongong Symphony Orchestra.

FRIENDS SPECIAL WELCOME TO OVERSEAS STUDENTS

With the help of an Australian Development Assistance Bureau grant of over $500 the Friends of the University are giving a special welcome to the overseas students who are coming to the University in 1985.

Two events are planned and all members are welcome to attend (RSVP to Giles Pickford on 270073).

On Tuesday 19 February at 3.30 p.m. there was an afternoon tea in the Union Common Room.

On Friday 8 March the overseas students will be taken on a guided tour of Wollongong including the City Gallery and the Town Hall. The tour buses will leave the front of the Union Building at 3.00 p.m. At the end of the tour the buses will take the students to a BBQ at the top of Mt. Keira (starting at 6.30 p.m.) and the Friends are also invited to this event. If the weather is bad, or if there is a fire ban, the BBQ will be held in the Sports Pavilion starting at 6.30 p.m.

Could any member of the Friends who is interested in this project ring Giles Pickford on 270073.

USE OF UNIADVICE

The Vice-Chancellor has addressed the following circular to all staff.

I am concerned that some academic staff are not using Uniadvice as the medium for their consulting work. I urge all staff with relevant interests to use its services in their own and the University's interests.

Uniadvice is this University's mechanism set up to assist academic staff with their consulting work and to ensure that the University and the academic departments received reasonable compensation for the inevitable use of University facilities that almost all consulting work involves. It provides staff with professional indemnity cover, which is important in a world in which litigation is increasing.

Uniadvice has been expanded over the past few years by the appointment of a full-time manager. It has been gazetted by the Department of Science and Technology as an Approved Research Organisation, with all the benefits that that implies; it has become actively involved in organising seminars and conferences, providing information services, and the promotion of technology transfer. Overall, it is in a position now to provide a wide range of advisory services and assistance to academic staff.

MANAGING THE METAMORPHOSIS — SCIENCE TO TECHNOLOGY CONFERENCE

People interested in attending the above conference in Adelaide from 11-13 November 1985 should contact Peter Sophios on 270076.

Letters

Dear Sir,

Threats from IGM

The latest EEO proposal, to introduce IGMs (Internal Grievance Mechanisms), is another intrusion into the autonomy essential to universities. It must be resisted. Pending the thorough analysis of the IGM document now proceeding, attention should be drawn to the following problems:

1. There are already procedures to manage staff complaints without the elaborate and costly apparatus required by IGMs.
2. IGM proposals will stifle academic debate where job changes are implied - it could be illegal even to write or publish this note! Already, the strongest affirmative-action proponents often refuse to debate the policy, on the grounds that it is offensive to do so.

3. IGM proposals provide practically no rights for 'respondents' (alleged causers of 'grievance').

4. The document is biased: for example, the way the cumbersome pronoun 'she/he' is used not only destroys the flow of any argument (see Shorter Oxford English Dictionary (1973), p. 936: 'He - of things not sexually distinguished'), but changes to 'he/she' when referring to a respondent!

5. The document allows an unacceptable intrusion of outside people into the normal university committee mechanism to help decide about conditions, even termination, of employment of staff.

Such emotive-based documents as the IGM one need far greater scrutiny than university committees have so far been prepared to give them. Affirmative-action policies so far introduced, like putting women (but not Catholics, or Yugoslav immigrants, or men, necessarily) on selection committees create far more discrimination than they pretend to solve, and may impair the pursuit of excellence.
