1985 SEES UPSURGE IN ABORIGINAL INTAKE

By Arthur Smith, Lecturer, Education.

During Orientation Week staff of the Faculty of Education were delighted to welcome 10 new Aboriginal students. Most of the students are in teacher education. For some time Faculty members have been keen to increase Aboriginal access to the field of teaching.

Recent publications such as the National Aboriginal Education Committee Report: 'Aborigines and Tertiary Education' (1984) and the Australian Vice-Chancellors' Committee response (November, 1984) support Commonwealth Tertiary Education Commission challenges to improve Aboriginal student access. The July 1983 Guidelines for the Commonwealth Tertiary Education Commission (CTEC) identified Aborigines as the group in Australian society: "most starkly under-represented across courses, institutions, and sectors within tertiary education ... and (as with other disadvantaged groups), they have been deprived of much that their society offers and society has been deprived of the contribution they could make."

The need for more Aboriginal teachers at all levels of education has been cited by a succession of national reports as urgent. The present Government has been challenged by the NAEC to produce 1,000 Aboriginal teachers by 1990. At present, of approximately 66,000 teachers in N.S.W. only 47 are Aboriginal. Mr. Robert Morgan, President of the N.S.W. Aboriginal Education Consultative Group (AECG) and Commissioner for Education, noted in 1981 that: "Since a quarter of Australia's Aboriginal population lives in N.S.W., this would mean 250 Aboriginal teachers in N.S.W. by 1990."

The University of Wollongong is at least attempting to assist the NAEC and AECG in reaching this important goal. Admission records at the University indicate that 16 Aboriginal students are presently enrolled. This figure represents an encouraging increase on last years Aboriginal student enrolment.

Although the NAEC Report referred to above identifies "the training of Aboriginal teachers" as "the priority field for the 1985-87 Triennium" other fields in urgent need of graduates (as listed by Aboriginal people) included: law, medicine, nursing, management and administration, linguistics, anthropology, communications, social work, economics, politics, environmental science, education apart from teaching (e.g. administration, curriculum development).

Present Aboriginal students are distributed by School and Faculty as follows:-

Aboriginal students at an Orientation Week function

School of Nursing	1
School of Creative & Performing Arts	1
School of Industrial & Administrative Studies	1
Faculty of Education	13

At a meeting of the Wollongong Branch of the N.S.W. Aboriginal Education Consultative Group last week Mrs. Linda Davis, Manager of the Aboriginal Community Centre, said that the Aboriginal community was extremely pleased about increased Aboriginal enrolments at the University. She said they were pleased, also, with the level of Aboriginal staff involvement and the positive role models and opportunities being communicated to Aboriginal young people.

There may well be other Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students enrolled who have not identified themselves as such, or have not yet contacted Aboriginal support and counselling staff working at the University.

Any Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander student who has not already done so is cordially invited to meet with staff and students as soon as possible at the Aboriginal Education Unit (Building D10, Ext. 3776). Any other staff member or student who wishes to visit the Unit is also most welcome.

LEAL ELECTED CHAIRMAN OF LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE ASSOCIATION

At the recent Congress of the Australasian Universities Language and Literature Association held in Melbourne, Professor Barry Leal of the Department of European Languages was elected Chairman of the Standing Committee for the next two years.

Founded in 1950, AULLA is the oldest and largest association of its kind in Australia and New Zealand. It currently has over 800 members, the majority being drawn from the 28 Australian and New Zealand universities, but there are also members in Papua New Guinea, Fiji, Hong Kong, North America and the United Kingdom. AULLA is affiliated to over a dozen institutions and learned bodies active in language and literature in Australia and New Zealand. Overseas, the Association is represented on the executive of the International Federation for Modern Languages and Literature, which in turn is linked with UNESCO.

AULLA exists in order to advance study and research in all fields of language and literature, both classical and modern, in the universities and tertiary institutions of Australia and New Zealand. Within the limits imposed by distance and resources it also seeks to give help and support to colleagues working in the Asia-Pacific region. AULLA publishes a scholarly journal, AUMLA, which appears twice a year and enjoys wide circulation abroad.

As Chairman of AULLA Professor Leal has as specific aims to increase the membership of the Association and to pursue, on its behalf, certain of the recommendations of the recently released Senate Report on a National Language Policy.

ASSERTION TRAINING

by Beth Urwin

Many women find that their interaction with others, both at work and in their personal lives, is a source of considerable stress and difficulty. To be able to express your needs and opinions clearly while being aware of your own rights and the rights of others in part of developing your own personal power.

To this end, an Assertion Training Group for women will be conducted at the University Counselling Centre by Beth Urwin. The group will operate probably on one evening per week (although day time could also be possible) for 2 hours over 8 weeks. It will focus on:-

1. discriminating between non-assertive, assertive and aggressive behaviours.
2. identifying and developing a belief system of personal rights and the rights of others.

THE GREENERY

"The Greenery" (formerly Institute Canteen) has reopened and will operate as a great new eating place offering not only a traditional range of cafeteria snacks but also a major service of vegetarian meals and health foods.

The Greenery is located on the edge of the Institute Hockey field, just 100 metres north west of the Pentagon and is within easy walking distance of the entire campus. Just look for the palm trees.

Opening hours — Monday to Thursday from 8.45 a.m. to 7.30 p.m. Fridays from 8.45 a.m. to 5.00 p.m.

WOLLONGONG UNIVERSITY NUCLEAR DISARM- AMENT ASSOCIATION

FRIENDS SPECIAL WELCOME TO OVERSEAS STUDENTS

With the help of an Australian Development Assistance Bureau grant of over $500 the Friends of the University are giving a special welcome to the overseas students who are coming to the University in 1985.

Today, Friday 8 March the overseas students will be taken on a guided tour of Wollongong including the City Gallery and the Town Hall. The tour buses will leave the front of the Union Building at 3.00 p.m. At the end of the tour the buses will take the students to a BBQ at the top of Mt. Keira (starting at 6.30 p.m.) and the Friends are also invited to this event. If the weather is bad, or if there is a fire ban, the BBQ will be held in the Sports Pavilion starting at 6.30 p.m.

Could any member of the Friends who is interested in this project ring Giles Pickford on 270073.

SENIOR CITIZENS DAY AT UNIVERSITY

About 80 senior citizens are expected to attend at the Union Hall on Thursday, 21 March, for an event that has now become a regular feature of Senior Citizens Week.

Letters

28 February, 1985

The Editor,
Gampus News.

Dear Sir,

Dr. de Lacey's recent letters in Campus News constitute a valuable contribution to the equal employment opportunity (EEO) debate in universities. He raises a number of issues which have not been debated satisfactorily in our universities. The paucity, and at times, rejection of a frank debate on the desirability of the introduction of EEO programs is a sad commentary on the propensity for critical appraisal that universities have bothered to offer in this debate. Dr. de Lacey argues that the introduction of EEO programs, involving the setting of 'targets' erodes the traditional merit selection criteria, which concentrate on personal achievement. His views have been criticised sharply by a number of his fellow academics. Nevertheless, his critics fail to appreciate that the setting of a 'target', lest it be a meaningless and redundant concept, pressures equal employment opportunity co-ordinators into designing minimum qualifications, justified by business necessity, which are necessary for the successful performance of an academic function. Indeed, if it can be proved that insistence on a high occupational qualification has a disparate impact on women because, statistically, more men than women possess this qualification, then this proof will usually be followed by a demand to exclude it from the job description. EEO co-ordinators, in their zeal to achieve the 'target', deny that universities have open-ended degrees of excellence and are instrumental in promoting the fallacious idea that all applicants who meet the academic job description are equally well qualified. My argument that the setting of a 'target' leads to a constant weakening of the concept of 'business necessity' is underscored by a recent article entitled 'Affirmative Action in Academia' (Australian Quarterly, vol. 56). The writer of that article suggests that research competence should not be considered as a genuine occupational qualification because "it constitutes a form of indirect discrimination against women." This discrimination, using the language of that writer, stems from the 'fact' that "the concentration on published works ignores or accords little weight to women's generally greater involvement with teaching, running of courses and pastoral care of students"! For the reasons explained above, Dr. de Lacey's warning that the setting of 'targets' may result in the appointment of some persons who are not as able as others to contribute to and to profit from their involvement with the role of a university, is eminently reasonable.

Dr. Gabriel Moens
