SHOOTING FOR THE STARS

Glen Moore to Chair Astronomy and Space Group

Mr Glen Moore, astronomer in the Department of Physics, whose confirmation of the rings around the planet Neptune was featured in the Summer issue of the University Gazette and other media, has been elected chairman of the Australian Astronomy and Space Exploration Group.

Broad objectives of the Group are:

- * to promote a greater awareness of astronomy and space exploration activities within the Australian community in general, and within educational circles in particular, with a view to having a public that is better informed on these matters, and more receptive to initiatives in both astronomy and space endeavours;
- * to have an organisation whereby the participants can draw on each other's resources and co-operation for their own projects or works where this is appropriate and applicable; and
- * to provide access to resources for school teachers, university lecturers, staff from museums, science centres, planetariums and astronomy centres and others.

PUBLIC LECTURE ON THE AUSTRALIA TELESCOPE

The Australia Telescope — a radio telescope — is being built by CSIRO. It is a Bicentennial Project, scheduled for completion in 1988, and will enable astronomers to look at the southern sky with a resolution higher than ever before possible.

'Resolution' is the ability to see very small objects, or to distinguish objects that are very close together. This telescope, which will be located in north-western NSW, would be able to see a five-cent coin in Sydney — provided the coin is radiating at the appropriate radio wavelength. To get this kind of resolution, you need a very large telescope, with a collecting diameter of hundreds of kilometres. To obtain these large diameters, radio astronomers build telescope 'arrays'. The Australia Telescope will consist of seven 22-metre antennas at Narrabri and Siding Spring and the 64-metre telescope at Parkes.

Visiting the University, to tell us more about this exciting modern instrument, is Dr J.R. Forster, Project Scientist for the telescope. He will give a public lecture at 8 pm on November 6 in Pentagon 4.

If the sky is clear after the lecture, there will be telescope viewing of astronomical objects from the roof of building 18.

INVITATION TO ATTEND NISEC COURSE

Dr Jennifer Jones and Dr Noeline Kyle of the Faculty of Education were invited to attend the two-day NISEC course on Single Sex Provision for Girls in the Co-Educational School, which took place in Sydney on October 11 and 12.

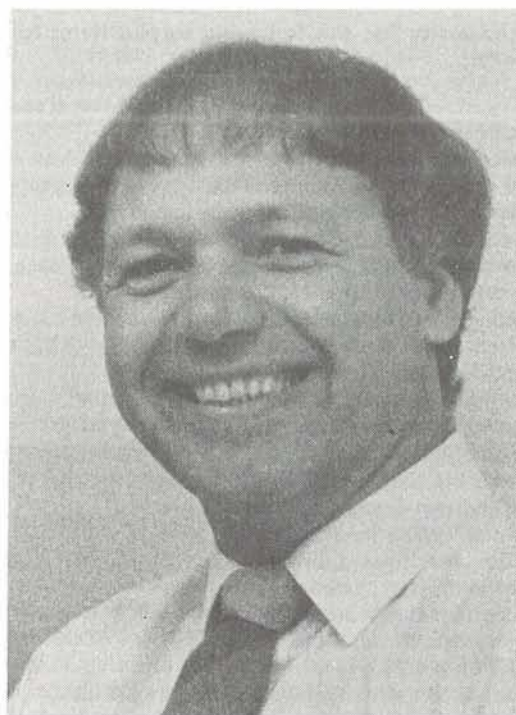

Attended by teachers and academics, the course was arranged in order to provide a forum for discussion of the introduction of single-sex classes as a strategy towards improving the self-esteem and the academic success rate for girls and boys in certain subjects.

Key speakers were Ms Judy Gill, University of Adelaide; Ms Joan Dunn, Hawker College, A.C.T., and a number of New South Wales state school teachers who are currently trialling single-sex classes either through PEP funding or the Projects for Girls Program.

Workshops focussed on the inclusive curriculum, as it applies to Industrial Arts and Mathematics and Science, and on Careers and Self-Esteem.

Dr Jones and Dr Kyle are currently surveying four Illawarra secondary schools (two state, one private and one Catholic) to assess the impact of change on teachers and students as a result of a move from single-sex to co-educational schooling. Both overseas and Australian research has revealed conflicting evidence on this issue and this local survey proposes to assess the change and explore implications for policy. It is intended to do a follow-up survey in two years. The survey has been made possible by a grant from the Centre for Education Policy Studies.

Attendance at the NISEC course by Dr Jones and Dr Kyle provided invaluable information for the completion of the Illawarra survey.

Fresh face on campus is that of the new University Secretary: Mr K.E. Baumber, who took up his position on Monday of this week — the day on which this picture was taken.

INTRODUCTION TO UNIVERSITY 1986

The Counselling Centre will be organising an Introduction to University Program for students commencing studies in 1986. The program is designed to introduce new students to other people starting university, the way the university operates and to university study. Students (Institute and Faculty) are needed to help run the program, which takes place in small groups. There will be two separate programs in late February.

If you are interested in helping, please contact the Counselling Centre on 270592 or call in (western side of the Union Building).

ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT

Students are reminded that the University regards academic misconduct as a very serious matter and they should note that the possession of unauthorized material during an examination, relevant to the examined subject, will result in an automatic failure for that subject and exclusion from the University.

MACINTOSH ON CAMPUS

As most staff and students will be aware, Apple Macintosh computers are available through the University at extremely favourable prices. In addition to that the University has taken the Macintosh to its collective heart and many departments use them for word processing and general computer use.

Indeed sales of Macintosh in the University have considerably exceeded targets. The first-year contract (1985) was for Macintosh computers to a value of $250,000. The second-year contract was valued at $280,000. In fact, to date, purchases from Apple total over $600,000 — so that the two year target has been exceeded in the first 12 months.

University Wins Excellent Research Funding by Tom Moore

Researchers in the University of Wollongong have been successful in winning financial support from the Australian Research Grants Committee for projects to be conducted in 1986.

ARGC has awarded almost $400,000 to support 25 research projects. Of these 12 are new and 13 continuing projects.

The ARGC annually makes awards on a competitive basis from applications submitted by academic staff from across Australia. The amount awarded this year is believed to be one of the largest ever awarded to Wollongong.

Commenting on the announcement, the Acting Vice-Chancellor, Professor Peter Rousch, said that it was particularly pleasing that staff of the University had been so successful.

Professor Rousch said that it was confirmation of the University's growing maturity and stature that it had done so well this year. The grants come at a time when the University is attempting to develop its research effort by, among other things, appointing a Deputy Vice-Chancellor with specific responsibility for research matters. Professor Ian Chubb of Flinders University will take up this position at the end of the year.

The grants have been made to researchers working in a wide range of academic disciplines. The largest single grant of over $66,000 has been made to a group from the Department of Physics led by Professor Peter Fisher. Their research project is entitled Electronic and Vibrational Spectra of Solids.

A grant of $27,000 was made to Associate Professor Noel Kennon and Dr Druce Dunne of the Department of Metallurgy for a project investigating shape memory alloys.

Other projects which have gained support include those related to the process of counselling, childrearing within the family system, the effects of technological change, and coastal storms and beach erosion.

Letters

Sir,

There is a notice in the Union Building advocating the boycott of French products as a protest against nuclear testing. Apparently China does a bit of nuclear weapons testing too, and China is just as close to Australia as Muroroa Atoll. So a boycott of everything made in China should be suggested to protestors.
