University of Wollongong shows the way to the future — PM

THE UNIVERSITY of Wollongong had a high profile recently at the launch of the Regional Development Strategy which was prepared by the Illawarra Regional Consultative Council and launched by the Prime Minister, the Hon R.J.L. Hawke.

In opening the proceedings, the Chairman of the Council and Member for Macarthur, Mr Stephen Martin, paid tribute to the Vice-Chancellor Professor Ken McKinnon for his input to the report, and commented that in his opinion the University was fast becoming the leading university in Australia.

The Prime Minister, in his speech, pointed out the critical importance of the expansion of the educational and skills base of the local economy and said: 'The University of Wollongong is now the second-largest employer in the Illawarra.

'The Commonwealth has increased its funding for the University by 150 per cent in real terms since 1983.

But equally, and in a sense perhaps more significant for the future, has been the way in which the University itself embarked on co-operative projects with industry that have generated significant new revenues — the increase in turnover figures is quite remarkable, the turnover from co-operative research programs has grown from $300,000 in 1985 to $14 million this financial year.

I say to you, Professor and to all those associated with you, that is indeed a very, very great tribute to you, to the University and it does provide the firm basis for the optimistic assertions that Steve Martin has made about your future.'

The Strategic Plan outlined in the Regional Development Strategy is in two parts — Specific Project Initiation and Formation of a Single Planning Body.

In the first part the new industries identified to enable diversification of the economic base are:

- Wollongong University telecommunications project;
- Port Kembla Marine Engineering Facility;
- Tourism infrastructure.

The Prime Minister has invited Professor McKinnon to communicate with him further about how the Federal Government may be able to assist with University projects that are of major importance to the region.

Graduation Ceremony on Friday in Sports Hall

THE OCTOBER Graduation Day will be held in the Sports Hall on Friday.

Approximately 270 graduates from all faculties will receive their awards from the Chancellor, the Hon. R.M. Hope.

The hall is expected to be full. Guests will be admitted only by ticket and are asked to be seated 10 minutes before the ceremony.

Progressive attitude to TAFE qualifications reinforced

A PUBLICATION launched last month by the Minister for Industrial Relations, Further Education, Training and Employment, Mr John Fahey, will enhance the career paths of successful TAFE students wanting to pursue further studies at the University of Wollongong.

The TAFE Students Guide to Advanced Standing in the University of Wollongong is the outcome of a pace-setting co-operative agreement on educational issues signed late last year by the University's Vice-Chancellor, Professor Ken McKinnon, and the Director-General of TAFE, Mr Michael Brinsden.

The release of this guide marks the achievement of a major goal: the extension of the credit transfer arrangements for TAFE students initiated by the agreement of all faculties at the University of Wollongong.

The Faculties of Arts and Education are formally linked to the credit transfer arrangements for the first time.

The Pro-Vice Chancellor of the University, Professor Lauchlan Chipman, said the agreement indicated the importance the University attached to the content of pre-existing TAFE courses in planning and efficient structure of its own courses in many areas.

Professor Chipman said the benefits of the enhanced and expanded credit transfer arrangements for TAFE students would extend far beyond the confines of higher education.

He said industry would benefit because the bridging of higher technician and paraprofessional qualifications to managerial and professional qualifications opened career paths.

He said improved career paths were essential to a ward restructuring and the creation of a more productive and competitive industrial base.

Dr Stuart Piggin's Macquarie Uni post

SENIOR Lecturer in the Department of History and Politics, Dr Stuart Piggin, will take up his new appointment as Master of Robert Menzies College on November 1.

We're switching to the latest phone technology

THE University of Wollongong is replacing its existing telephone system with a Voice and Data System (VADS) that will greatly improve office efficiency and internal and external communications.

Nortel has won the $600,000 tender for the installation of the VADS system.

The new system will feature Integrated Services Digital Network (ISDN) access from the Nortel PABX to the public network.

This will be provided by a fibre optic cable to be installed by Telecom Australia, who recently commenced work on a contract to upgrade the campus telephone cabling system.

ISDN enables voice, fax, image and data signals to be combined into single, high capacity transmissions.

Existing telephone handsets will be replaced with more 'user friendly' units to facilitate use of the PABX's advanced features.

This will include access to a new voice mail system to enable unattended answering, plus recording, editing and sending of messages to multiple users.

Fax connections will be progressively transferred to the new PABX and provide cost savings on internal campus transmissions.

As well as providing the capacity for data transmissions, the new PABX will assist mobile personnel, such as security and maintenance staff, by integrating their external pagers with the campus telephone system.

Our switchboard operators will make use of advanced facilities by way of new consoles and on-line directory lookup.

The Nortel PABX is easily expandable to accommodate future campus growth, and will be managed by the University's Information Technology Service group (ITS).

Switchboard staff Sally Stawanski, Molra Ruototo and Joan Ford. Absent were Linda Stoble, Annette Mason and Lyn Robinson.

As part of this upgrading exercise our telephone operators will move into expanded and updated accommodation adjacent to their present home in Building 8. Acknowledging the technological complexity of their equipment they will, later this year, transfer their allegiance from the Office Services Department to ITS.

The change to ISDN access will necessitate a change of telephone number for the main University switchboard and all direct indial extensions.

We have reserved with Telecom 3000 numbers for future growth, being the series 213 xxx, 214 xxx and 215 xxx.

Commencing with the 213 xxx range, no current internal extension number need be changed, and they will all be reachable by direct indial in an unambiguous manner, for example: Student Enquiries Desk, internal extension 3927, direct indial 213927.

The cut-over date is planned for December 15.

Initially, to accommodate the number change, Telecom operator will intercept calls to the old University number, inform the calling party of the new number and connect them to the University.

This service will be retained over a longer period for international and STD calls but will be replaced, after a settling period, with a recorded message for local callers.

Nortel and the University will make training sessions available for all users on an on-going basis to ensure optimum use of this exciting new facility.

Capt. Brian McCarthy to deliver Sir Richard Kirby lecture

CAPTAIN Brian McCarthy of the Australian Federation of Air Pilots will deliver the 12th annual Sir Richard Kirby Lecture at the University of Wollongong on October 15.

The lecture, entitled 'The Airlines Dispute: Wage Determination or Union Extremism?', will be held in the Pentagon Lecture Theatre 1 from 6.30pm.

Capt. McCarthy will try to dispel the idea of pilots as a privileged elite and will add some history of the pilots, the union, and the airlines dispute. He will also offer his assessment of the consequences of the airline dispute for the future of wage determination and industrial relations in Australia.

The 1990 Industrial Relations prizes for outstanding undergraduates will also be presented.

Parking forum date change

THE FORUM to discuss parking on campus will be held on October 10 at 12.30pm in Pentagon Lecture Theatre 1.

The forum had been planned for October 3, but was changed because of the recess period.

TASC report on technology policy for the '90s

A MAJOR report for the Federal Government recommends several key strategic changes to technology policy and research directions for industry, in order to make Australian firms more competitive in the '90s.

The report provides clear advice about strengthening industry development through policies encouraging more co-operation between companies, better harnessed research and smarter local manufacturing.

Launched by the Minister for Industry, Technology and Commerce, Senator John Button, the report is titled Technology Policy for the 1990s: Lessons of the 80s.

Prepared by Wollongong University's Centre for Technology and Social Change (TASC), the report commends several policy innovations in the 1980s, but calls for a new agenda for the 1990s.

Senator Button said the TASC report underlined the need for Australian business to 'compete as a pack'.

He said firms contributing components and services to an exportable product should work more closely to ensure every aspect of production is kept up to date with international trends and standards.

Senator Button and few Australians would disagree with the report's conclusion: the nation must pursue a broad strategy of microeconomic reform, export enhancement and technological change in industry.

'That is starting to happen,' he said. 'But the kinds of significant changes we need to make cannot be achieved by Government action alone.'

'It is sometimes said that in the 1970s, Australia placed excessive faith in governments, and in the 1980s excessive faith in the private sector.'

In the 1990s we need a more questioning approach to the roles of both government and the private sector and a more appropriate balance between the two.

Senator Button, Professor Ron Johnston, Mr Don Scott-Kemmis and Vice-Chancellor Professor Ken McKinnon

'This applies well to technology policy. Getting it right must be a joint effort by governments, industry, unions and institutions.'

'If this report helps us better understand our past — both the successes and the failures — it will help inform the debate on our future.'

'It offers some ideas on a future approach and should be closely studied.'

Director of TASC, Professor Ron Johnston, said the report underlined the need for Australian research to be greatly expanded and to become more purpose-driven, combining with industry to set goals, and coming under continuous review to ensure its effectiveness.

'The other area where the report points to a gap in our current program is management education,' Professor Johnston said.

'Policies are needed to develop skills among managers that will allow them to see the whole chain of product development, from research through to packaging and distribution as vital components to export success.'

'Research also needs to be targeted to industries which have proven capacity to apply this combination of strategies, in a program emphasising international competitiveness rather than across-the-board industry assistance.'

Professor Johnston said the report, which would be widely circulated among industry and Government agencies, highlighted the key role of Government purchases of locally produced goods in helping to build export competitive industries.

He said the key to export success lay in producing the best locally, and then selling to the world.

'Purchasing policies needed to assist local industry with advance notice of standards and encouragement to step up onto the world stage.'

'By tackling the longer-term challenge of marketable social infrastructure, we can end up selling our health management and delivery systems, our expertise in tourism and hospitality provision, and our capacity to educate technologically-confident school and post-school graduates.'

'These are areas previously seen as soft subjects, but they have direct potential to add to our export capacity, if policies bite the bullet on setting high standards which local public and private sector agencies have to live up to.'

Examination timetables are out — check for any possible clashes

STUDENTS must check the provisional Spring Session examination timetable displayed on noticeboards around the campus and notify the Student Enquiries Office of clashes by Friday October 12.

The final examination timetable will be published on Monday October 22.

Examinations will be held from November 10-26.

Examination results for spring session and double session (Code A) 1990 subjects will be posted to each student's registered home address on Tuesday December 18.

Students should ensure that the University has their correct address before November 30.

Examination results will also be displayed in Pentagon Foyer on Tuesday December 18 from noon.

Students who have not paid outstanding charges to the University, such as library and parking fines, student loans and other charges by Friday December 7 will have their examination results withheld.

Where outstanding charges are paid after December 7, results will not be available until after Wednesday January 2.

Students who will satisfy the requirements for a degree/diploma/associate diploma at the end of spring session 1990 must submit an Application for an Academic Award form by November 30 if they wish to participate in the May 1991 graduation ceremonies.

Information about examinations will not be given by telephone.

Car parking incident

PARKING is often difficult on campus, but an occurrence on September 13 cannot be viewed charitably.

Witnessed by a member of staff, the occupants of a Ford car lifted and moved another vehicle from a parking space near the Central Store to a vacant 'Disabled' space nearby.

The Ford was then driven into the originally-occupied position.

The original occupant of the parking space was booked $40.

Eating Nutri-grain and breathing good Illawarra air cannot justify dobbing a colleague into a $40 fine.

Justice has prevailed
