The 'new' Weerona College is officially opened

THE CHANCELLOR of the University of Wollongong, the Honourable RM Hope, AC, CMG, QC officially opened the University's second Collegiate hall of residence, Weerona College.

Also in attendance were the Lord Mayor, Alderman Frank Arkell; the Vice-Chancellor of the University, Professor Ken McKinnon; Chairman of the Australian Broadcasting Corporation, Mr Bob Somerville; and Mrs Mary Charker who lived at Weerona from 1961 until 1977 with her late husband Cecil Charker who managed the then AIS Weerona Hostel.

Weerona has been operating as a residential facility within the University since 1987 after it had been purchased from BHP on terms that reflected the strong relationship be-

Suzanne Uniacke appointed to health ethics committee

DEPARTMENT of Philosophy lecturer, Ms Suzanne Uniacke, has been appointed to the newly-formed Ethics Committee of the Board of the Illawarra Area Health Service.

The Ethics Committee will develop policies and protocols that will:

- Set priorities in the rationing of health services;
- Establish equity of access to health services;
- Assist in decision making relating to active medical intervention when patients have a poor prognosis;
- Ensure the delivery of quality health care while respecting the dignity and rights of the individual.

This Committee is an advisory committee to the Board and includes two Board members, the Chief Executive Officer, a minister of religion, a solicitor, a medical and a nursing representative, a lay representative and a social worker.

The Committee meets as required and receives papers from staff relating to ethical matters.

Ms Uniacke has a reputation in academia for her publications on ethics and in the community for her input into current issues.

She has been invited to make submissions to the Federal Law Reform Commission on privacy, and the Victorian Law Reform Commission on defences to homicide. She has published extensively on such matters as self-defence.

Issues such as the rationing of access to expensive health care services, and setting priorities in health research and health maintenance are among the central questions of what has come to be called 'applied ethics'.

Ethics is that branch of Philosophy concerned with questions of right and wrong and the basis of moral worth.

Applied ethics deals with concrete issues and public policy dilemmas which have a moral or ethical dimension.

The Department of Philosophy at Wollongong University was one of the first to introduce subjects concerned with applied ethics, and has long been active in research in this area.

There is increasing community demand for professionals in areas including business, medicine, law and education to be trained in ethics by people professionally qualified in the discipline, in order to meet growing public expectations about social responsibility and sensitivity of moral issues.

New building will be a moving experience

THE completion of the new General Purpose Academic Building (Bld 40) in December this year will mean many relocations.

Manager, Buildings and Grounds, Kevin Turnbull, said the re-allocation of space means:

- All of the Faculty of Commerce will move to the new building (Bld. 40) from Buildings 19 and 22.

- The Faculty of Law will also be located in Building 40. Law is currently located in Buildings 19 and 30.
- Following the relocation of Commerce and Law, the remaining occupants of Building 19, primarily the Faculty of Arts, will receive some additional space. For example, the Department of Languages will receive some additional space for the development of Japanese.
- The Centre for Staff Development will also gain some additional space in Building 19.
- Parts of the Faculty of Health and Behavioural Sciences will also be located in Building 19 including the existing Department of Psychology; some of the Nursing positions currently located in building 23; and the Public Health and Nutrition Unit which currently shares space with Human Movement Science in Buildings 8 and 9. The Dean of the Faculty's Office will also be located in Building 19.
- The Graduate School of Journalism, currently using temporary space in the Technology Centre building, will be located in refurbished space in Building 22 vacated by the Computer Laboratories (south side) of the Department of Business Systems.

- The Computer Laboratories and teaching space on the north side of Building 22 will also be refurbished as a student computer laboratory facility under the control of Information Technology Services.
- As a result of the Nursing staff moving from Building 23 to Building 19, additional space in Building 23 will become available for the Faculty of Education and School of Creative Arts.
- There will also be some relocations within Buildings 8 and 9 by the Human Movement Science Unit of the Faculty of Health and Behavioural Sciences.

Mr Turnbull said the completion of Building 40 will trigger a long and complex series of moves that will take place primarily during January, 1991.

'Each link in the chain will be crucial and the co-operation of all concerned will be vital to ensure all moves are completed with minimal time and disruption,' he said.

'Those concerned with the moves will be provided with further details in due course.'

Graduation ceremony deadline coming

THE NEXT graduation ceremonies will be held in May 1991.

Students who expect to complete the requirements for their degrees or diplomas at the end of Spring Session (or who have previously completed requirements and not taken out the degree or diploma) and who wish the award to be conferred at a May Graduation Ceremony, must submit an application for the conferral of the award by November 30.

If you expect to complete your course during Summer Session you must also apply by the same date. Application forms are available from the Student Enquiry counter.

Stephen Hill says Asia is ready to take the international lead

CO-FOUNDER and director of the National Centre for Research Policy at the University of Wollongong, Professor Stephen Hill, believes Asia is on the verge of taking a major international lead.

But it is an economic drive without a supportive cultural vision, he said.

Professor Hill put this view forward at the Asia-Australia lecture series of the Contemporary Asia Centre at the University of NSW. The lecture was called 'Science and Technology,

Keys to Asian Renaissance of the 1990s?'

He likened the changes in Asia to those of Renaissance Europe. He sees the stumbling blocks to the continuing economic development as relating to questions on the environment and social equity. His observations on 25 years' experience working with Asian governments on science and technology policy.

He is chairman of the UNESCO-based Science and Technology Policy Asian Network.

Kathie Webb presents papers to two national conferences

MASTER of Education Honours student in the School of Learning Studies, Kathie Webb, recently presented papers on her research in progress at two national conferences on education in Hobart.

Following submission of a poster presentation of her current research to the ACEA National Conference, organisers decided her topic area of 'supervision' was relevant to conference themes and requested Ms Webb present a seminar followed by open forum discussion.

Entitled Supervision, is it really helping teachers?, the paper outlined some surprising findings of research carried out over the last 12 months into supervision of experienced teachers.

Kathie has been interviewing executives and teachers in two South Coast primary schools with respect to their perceptions, beliefs and concerns about supervision.

The research highlights major issues related to the professional development of teachers in schools.

It is clear that experienced teachers have definite ideas on how they want to be supervised and what they want from supervision,' Ms Webb said.

Kathie was one of 12 students who presented papers at the 1990 National Joint Conference for Lecturers and Postgraduate Students in Educational Administration held at the University of Tasmania on September 26-29.

Thirty-four people from universities around Australia gathered to share their research projects and their ideas and philosophies of educational research methodology.

In addition to Australian academics of high repute such as Dr Judith Chapman (Monash University), Dr Brian Caldwell and Dr Gabriele Lakomski (University of Melbourne), the students were also treated to presentations by Chair of Education at Cambridge University, Professor David Hargreaves, Chair of Education at Kenyatta University Nairobi, Professor Jotham

Olembo, Chair of Education University of Alberta, Canada, Professor Eugene Ratsoy, and Associate Professor Arthur Schwartz (University of Calgary).

It was a great experience to spend several days with these people, listening and sharing views of education,' Kathie said.

At the end of the conference the friendly informal atmosphere that had prevailed was highlighted in Jotham Olembo's speech, when he said he had found difficulty telling the students from the professors.

Students and lecturers had participated as equals - they had been learners together.

More than 500 educators and academics registered for the second conference, 'Celebrating A New Era in Education', at West Point September 29-October 3.

It combined the annual conferences of the Australian Council for Education Administration, Australian Primary Principals Association and Australian Secondary Principals Association. Keynote speakers included Professor David Hargreaves, Dr Judith Chapman, Dr Brian Caldwell, Dr Jillian Maling and Professor Malcolm Skilbeck.

The theme of the conference was 'What is and what might be in education'.

Speakers and presenters described positive trends in education, outlined issues in need of resolution, predicted challenges likely to arise in the nineties and suggested strategies for meeting them.

A teacher for 17 years, Kathie has been Head Teacher Home Economics at Bomaderry High School since 1981.

She became interested in supervision after evaluating a regional inservice course for Master of Education in 1989.

She hopes to complete the research for MEd. Hons by the end of this year and plans to undertake a PhD researching Professional Development of Teachers from early 1991.

She is married with three children and lives at Gerringong.
