

Vitamin C and cancer: medicine or politics?

The vitamin C and cancer controversy is the topic for a public lecture at the University of Wollongong by Evelleen Richards on 27 May.

The controversy centres on the claim by Linus Pauling, Nobel laureate and world-famous advocate of peace and vitamin C, that megadoses of vitamin C (10grams or more per day) can control or palliate cancer.

Associate Professor Richards, a social historian of science and medicine, has spent several years studying the course of the vitamin C and cancer debate, including a period in residence at the Linus Pauling Institute of Science and Medicine at the invitation of Linus Pauling.

Her lecture is entitled Vitamin C and Cancer: Medicine or Politics?

The dispute has continued for more than 20 years amid mounting hostility and increasingly vehement charges of bias, fraud and conspiracy.

It has been punctuated by running battles over publication and funding, by personal attacks on the scientific and ethical credibility of the disputants, and by media and political interventions.

It has become particularly intense over the claims and counterclaims surrounding the two negative randomised controlled clinical trials of vitamin C carried out by leading cancer specialists at the Mayo Clinic in 1979 and 1985.

It is a fascinating story in its own right.

But much more than this, it is also about bettering our understanding of the ways in which medical knowledge of disease and its treatment is produced, accepted, and applied.

As a case study, it offers some valu-

Associate Professor Evelleen Richards – to present seminar on Vitamin C able insights into the processes by which medical therapies are evaluated and put into practice.

Associate Professor Richards' lecture draws on the prolific and far-flung correspondence of Pauling, manuscripts, newspaper reports, interviews and journal articles, to paint a vivid picture of the politics of treatment evaluation.

She is Associate Professor in the Department of Science and Technology Studies at the University of Wollongong and the author of Vitamin C and Cancer: Medicine or Politics? published by Macmillan Press (1991).

She has also published widely in the areas of the social history of evolutionary biology, the sociology of scientific controversies, and gender and science.

With the aid of an ARC Grant, she is currently at work on a book on the history of Charles Darwin's concept of sexual selection, to be published by the University of Chicago Press.

The public lecture will be held at 6.30pm on Wednesday 27 May in the Union Function Centre. For bookings contact Marilyn Yatras, tel. 213943.

Brief News

Director of the Centre for Research Policy at this university, Professor Stephan Hill, addressed the House of Representatives Committee for Long Term Strategies in Canberra on the 5 May on Creativity and Capture: The Social Architecture of Technological Innovation in Australia

Professor Hill's talk demonstrated some of the things that Australia must do to stop fumbling the extraordinary opportunities presented to this nation.

These included:

- paying attention to history and being aware that our national culture 'froze' 100 years ago into a non-industrial stance that is inconvenient to the 21st Century,
- pressing social buttons that change culture and identity; including changing national symbols,
- recognising that the rules for technological innovation have changed towards strategic alliances and cooperation rather than free-market competition,
- building long-term relationships with Asia that capitalise on our cultural and scientific strengths.

Professor Hill is Foundation Chairman of Stepan, the UNESCO-based Science and Technology Policy Asian Network, International Co-ordinator for APEC's industrial technology program, and Chairman of Social Sciences and Humanities within the Pacific Science Association.

The current report in the Higher Education Series - 'Course Completions' - has been placed on the Bulletin Board in the Administration File Server. It can be found in the Higher Education Info folder.

The Higher Education Series is produced by DEET and contains information on institutional trends Australia-wide.

In accordance with the University's procedures for reviewing academic units, the Vice-Chancellor has initiated a review of the Department of Science and Technology Studies.

It is anticipated that the review will take place in August or September

Dean of the Faculty of Law, Professor John Goldring, with partners from Minter Ellison, Pamela Madafiglio and Roger Hamilton. Ms Madafiglio gave a paper on Liability of Higher Education Law: Common Law, and Mr Hamilton gave the final session on Taxation and Superannuation Law

Sponsored by Minter Ellison

Higher Education and the law

The Faculty of Law organised a conference from 7-8 May to examine aspects of law that are relevant to higher education institutions.

The conference, sponsored by Minter Ellison, combined formal papers with workshops based on real or hypothetical cases, which provided examples of the legal problems that arise in the administration of higher education institutions and training in the skill of recognising when expert advice is required.

Papers included:

- The legal environment of Higher Education - independence, funding, Ombudsman, freedom of information
- Marketing and trade regulation law
- Liability of Higher Education
- Employment and anti-discrimination
- Incentives for research and development
- Intellectual law

Representatives from universities in NSW, Victoria, Queensland and the ACT attended the conference at the Northbeach Parkroyal.

this year. The review will be a "full review" as defined in the procedures.

Submissions to the Review Panel are invited from the academic community.

Submissions, which will be treated as confidential, should be forwarded to me no later than 30 June 1992.

(Please note that a copy of the University's review procedures can be obtained from the Administration File Server - refer to Section M of the Management Handbook which is located in the "Public Information" folder on the Server.)

Enquiries in relation to this matter should be addressed to Peter Wood on extension 3943.

The University may make up to two submissions in relation to the DEET National Priority Reserve Fund (Second Round, 1992).

Guidelines have been sent to the heads of all academic units and administrative branches.

Applications must reach the Pro Vice-Chancellor Professor Lauchlan Chipman, by no later than May 22.

Vice-Chancellor's Outstanding Service Awards for General Staff

The inaugural Outstanding Service Awards were presented this year at the University day function on 11 May to members of general staff who had achieved an exceptional success, given outstanding service or shown recognised initiative in their work.

The first recipients were:

Mr David Price,

Department of Geography

David Price, a Professional Officer in the Department, has played a major role in establishing and running the Thermoluminescence (TL) Dating Laboratory which is classed as Australia's leading sedimentary dating laboratory. The success of this facility has brought national recognition to the Department and to the University.

Mr Iain Murray, Mr Bob Galvin, Mr Gary Watkins, Mr Vince Raschilla

Cleaning

Messrs Murray, Galvin, Watkins and Raschilla are Cleaning Crew Chiefs who, in the last 12 months, have implemented the new Cleaning Agreement reached by negotiations between the University and the Federated Miscellaneous Workers Union. The Agreement focussed on changes to work practices resulting in increases in productivity. They undertook the difficult and sensitive task of implementation across the campus with both enthusiasm and commitment.

Ms Ellen Peascod

Student Administration

Ms Peascod, a part-time Administrative Assistant, has

Professor Fred Hollows captivated a near capacity audience in the Hope Theatre at the function held to commemorate the establishment of the University of Wollongong as a college of the University of NSW in May 1961. Professor Hollows gave the address entitled An Australian and Wollongong contribution to equality of eye care between the rich and poor nations. He outlined the importance of the lens factory he had established in Wollongong under the guidance of Steven Miller, who is on leave from his position as senior technical officer in the Department of Physics. Before the address a number of staff were presented with awards demonstrated initiative by recommending and implementing changes to procedures associated with the Summer Session enrolments. These changes resulted in simpler administrative arrangements for students and staff producing savings to the value of approximately $7,000 in postage, printing and temporary assistance.

Rosemary Cooper with the Chancellor at the award ceremony

Ms Annette Meldrum

University Library

Ms Meldrum, a General Library Assistant in Information Systems, has demonstrated outstanding initiative by developing a 'Loans Training Package' which ensures that at least a minimum level of training is available for all new and casual staff. The package provides a more professional approach to training and will serve as a model for the development of similar packages in other Library departments.

Ms Rosemary Cooper

Faculty of Commerce

In the last 12 months, Rosemary Cooper, the Faculty's Professional Officer, has built up this new position which includes the provision of on-going financial and statistical information to the Dean and Department Heads. Ms Cooper has, in particular, displayed great initiative by developing and maintaining several computer based systems in order to provide timely and accurate information to the Faculty.

Each recipient and group of recipients received a certificate and a cheque for $1000 or a contribution to the value of $1000 towards attendance at courses or conferences of their choice.

Wollongong wins consultancy on high-tech teaching

The University of Wollongong has won a consultancy from the Higher Education Council of the National Board of Employment, Education and Training to undertake a study of the potential use of technology to deliver higher education to the workplace.

Announcing the award, Pro Vice-Chancellor Professor Lauchlan Chipman said it was further evidence that the University is recognised as a national leader in communications, information technology and multimedia.

He said the consultancy would not just examine the technology of delivery, but would attach particular importance to curriculum design and other educational objectives.

The University may also be in line for a second consultancy dealing with overseas experience in non-traditional modes of delivery in higher education, including these state-of-the-art technologies.

However this is still subject to further negotiation with the council and some modifications to the original tender may be necessary if it is to gain final acceptance.

Professor Chipman said that the recognition was very heartening, and a tribute to the quality of research and applications development that was being done in the University, in the new technologies of educational delivery.

Shakespeare's AS YOU LIKE IT

You'll Love It!!!

Royalty in bright yellow tights!!!
Singing and dancing in a Shakespearean forest!!!
And no men!!!

What more can we possibly expect?

The School of Creative Arts' graduating actors, directed by Kate Clarkson present Shakespeare's As You Like It. This much loved play is produced as a modern fairytale made complete with singing and dancing from an energetic all female cast with an original soundscape composed for the production. Visually, the play is a dream, the atmosphere is in keeping with the exciting Shakespearean carnival feel, and the set literally encapsulates you under the ribbons of a maypole.

So come and join the runaways, philosophers, fools, dukes and lovers in the estranged forest of fantasy, disguise and discovery.

The University has recently established a new policy on change of name for all staff.

Any employee who wishes to officially change their name on the University records will be required to provide the University with either a passport or a marriage, birth or deed poll certificate.

Alternatively, the employee may advertise the change of name in a daily newspaper.

This procedure does not automatically alter the name of any spouse, children or siblings of the employee who may also work at the University.

For comprehensive details of this policy contact Ann Kiceluk on 4284, or consult 'Policies' in Staff Matters on the Administration File Server.

SEX – Hypothetically speaking

Weerona College canvassed issues with its residents recently by conducting a Geoffrey Robertson-style Hypothetical entitled What part of NO don't you understand?

Issues covered in the hypothetical in front of 100 residents included sexual harassment, sexual abuse, sexuality, contraception and homosexuality.

The hypothetical maker for the occasion was Damien Considine from the Faculty of Law. Joining Weerona residents on the panel were guests from administration, counselling, the SRC and community bodies.

Some of the panel engaging in the hypothetical were (from left): Weerona resident, Anthony Sordridge, Vice Principal (Administration) Ken Baumber, Weerona resident, Kirsty Beckenham, University counsellor Maxine Lacey, and Weerona tutor, Angelo Kaissidis.
