The Song Company: Artists in Residence for 1994

The Song Company, acclaimed as one of the most remarkable vocal ensembles in Australia, will call the University of Wollongong home for 12 months.

During that time they will give a series of concerts and workshops and perform at some University functions.

Two members of the Company, Jane Edwards and Clive Birch, will give some classes in the Faculty of Creative Arts.

They will also promote their association with the University in their publicity.

The Song Company consists of six of Australia's most thrilling voices.

It was established in 1984 by Charles Colman and has earned itself an outstanding reputation as Australia's premier vocal sextet.

The singers have achieved the blend and balance needed for the great works of the vocal chamber music repertoire.

The ensemble's repertoire covers the whole range of vocal music from 15th century to the present day and includes works by two members of staff of the University's Faculty of Creative Arts, Andrew Schultz and Andrew Ford.

The Artistic Director, Roland Peelman, was appointed in 1990 and under his leadership The Song Company has presented many memorable performances including Purcell's Dido and Aeneas and The Fairy Queen, and Monteverdi's Eighth Book of Madrigals all with period instruments.

The singers are sopranos Jane Edwards and Penelope Sharpe, mezzo soprano Jo Burton; tenor Richard Black; baritone Matthew Glasgow; and bass baritone Clive Birch.

Guy Warren, now Director, University Art Collection

In appreciation of his work in building up the University Art Collection, the Vice-Chancellor has appointed Mr Guy Warren, Coordinator of the University Art Collection, to a fractional professorial position, until the end of 1995, with the title of Director of the Collection.

In the short time he has been coordinating the Collection, Mr Warren has added many notable works, including a large scale painting by aboriginal artist Emily Kame Kngwarreye, several works on loan from the John Osborne Sullivan Collection that are now superbly displayed in the new Keira View building, a work by John Olsen which is also on loan and works by Kevin Connor, Fred Cress, Guy Warren and others on loan from a private collection. Mr Warren is available to discuss any plans departments or units of the University may have to hang works of art, or any proposals for additions to the Collection on the basis of a loan or permanent acquisition. He can be contacted on (02) 436 3486.

Additions to children's literature and indigenous writing

On March 14, the New Literatures Research Centre launched two publications.

NLRC member Michael Stone edited the proceedings of the second children's literature conference, 'Australian Children's Literature: Finding a Voice'.

This conference is now a major event in its field attracting people from across the nation.

It serves as a much-needed meeting ground of publishers, book enthusiasts and scholars in an area previously little regarded by academic institutions.

The second book, edited by Paul Sharrad, brings together for classroom use some of the seminal essays on indigenous writing from the Pacific. 'Readings in Pacific Literature' has already earned plaudits for providing access to key critical material now hard to come by in a field that is 'taking off' as a teaching subject.

The books were launched by Jean Ferguson, sometime teacher in children's literature with the Department of English and well known local bookseller and columnist.

She reflected on the 'decolonising' of children's publishing and reading content in the last 50 years, the dangers of homogenising global publishing, and the need for infrastructures to support literacy in the Pacific.

Both books were significant contributions to promoting a vital regional culture.

Associate Professor Dorothy Jones rounded off the occasion with a seminar paper 'Fabricating Texts of Empire' on the symbolism of textiles in imperial culture.

Both books are available from NLRC, c/- the English Department, for $12 plus postage.

Mr Johnson is demonstrating the ice drops experiment, which is based on the density of sunflower oil being between the density of ice and water. When ice floating on sunflower oil is allowed to melt, the water droplets are dense enough to sink through the oil. It is a visual experiment with an easy to understand concept, exactly the kind of interactive chemistry exhibit that workshop participants were looking at.

Interactive chemistry exhibits draw on international talent

In conjunction with the University, an international workshop for the Design of Interactive Chemistry Exhibits was held from 13-16 March.

The workshop was a forerunner to Australian National Chemistry Week which started on 28 March.

The workshop, organised by Geoff Snowden from the Australasian Science and Technology Exhibitors Network (ASTEN), Canberra, attracted visitors from interstate, New Zealand, United States and Wales.

It saw a gathering of people from hands-on science centres: the Royal Australian Chemistry Institute; the Powerhouse Museum, Sydney; the NZ Science Centre; the Adelaide Science Centre; and Questacon, the National Science and Technology Centre in Canberra.

The aims of the workshop were to provide a forum to design and/or model new interactive chemistry exhibits, learn new skills, develop existing ones and exchange ideas.

The outcome was the production of exhibit concepts to an advanced stage – sketches, advice for building, preferred materials, exhibition settings – for a suite of exhibits on the general theme of Everyday Chemistry.

These are prototype ideas for stand-alone, hands-on activities.

The theme of Everyday Chemistry provides the opportunity for developing exhibit concepts of appeal to a diverse general interest target audience and also supports the aim to bring chemistry to students.

The production of chemistry exhibits has proven very challenging for science centres the world over.

This is because most chemical changes are not readily reversible; require replacement of consumables and the cleaning of apparatus; the importance of safety and supervision; and running costs of exhibits requiring consumables are directly proportional to the number of users.

One session was designated to the demonstration of prepared exhibit designs and models with group work on developing chemical concepts in the Department of Chemistry at the University of Wollongong. It highlighted the fact that chemistry is turning things into something else.

One of the participants, Colin Johnson, from TECHNIQUEST in Cardiff, Wales is the Director of the CHEMIQUEST project for hands-on science experiments.

His visit was funded by the British Council which has supported this Interactive Chemistry Exhibits program along with the Science and Technology Awareness Program administered by the Department of Industry, Technology and Regional Development.

He previously worked as a chemistry teacher before he became part of the Senior Management team of TECHNIQUEST – the Welsh version of the Wollongong Science Centre, and approximately twice the size.

Visit to Boyd property stimulates portfolio

A field trip to the properties of Arthur and Yvonne Boyd, Riversdale and Bundanon on the Shoalhaven River, has resulted in the completion of the Bundanon Print Portfolio.

The portfolio is an exhibition of 16 prints made by students and staff of the Printmaking department of the University of Wollongong in response to the July 1993 workshop.

The portfolio is on display in the Long Gallery at the University of Wollongong until 10 May.

This coincides with the Postgraduate Students Exhibition which opened on 25 March and the Faculty of Creative Arts Staff Exhibition opening on 15 April.

At the preview of the Bundanon Print Portfolio, David Chalker, Chairperson of The Bundanon Trust received two sets of the portfolio on behalf of The Bundanon Trust and for Arthur and Yvonne Boyd.

Each of the artists also received a full set.

fessor Barry Conyngham, is a board member of the Bundanon Trust and after initial interest shown by the Printmaking department, contact was made with David Chalker.

Ken Orchard and Leonie Molloy from the Faculty of Creative Arts consequently organised a four-day stay for 14 eager printmaking major students supervised by three staff at the Riversdale property.

The purpose of the stay was to have a stimulus for a major project, to do drawings and paintings—mostly landscapes—while keeping in mind the view of a portfolio.

The media represented in the portfolio include woodcuts, linocuts, mono-prints, etchings and aquatints.

The portfolio exhibition is open to the public and two copies will be for sale, with proceeds going to the Printmaking department for purchase of equipment.

New Executive Officer for Friends, ODCA

David Muscio, previously the Faculty Officer, Health and Behavioural Science, has taken on a new challenge in the dual role of Executive Officer of the Office of Development and Community Affairs (ODCA) and Executive Officer of the Friends.

Since the Friends became an association in 1993 the position of executive officer has been vacant.

As a life member of the association John Bell has acted in the position on a voluntary basis to try to maintain the established activities of the Friends.

It will be Mr Muscio's role to lead the association with a new phase of its development, with emphasis on creating and enhancing in our community, understanding, pride, enthusiasm and support for the role and achievements of the University.

There has been no full-time executive officer since Juliet Richardson was appointed Alumni Officer in 1990.

Mr Muscio will serve the Friends for half his time.

The other half will be to assist Peter Rose in coordinating the roles and support services of the other units of the Office of Development and Community Affairs; the Co-operative Scholarships Program, The Foundation and the Alumni Association.

His dual roles are seen as being complementary.

Mr Muscio is in the United Kingdom to fulfil pre-existing commitments and will return to the Faculty of Health and Behavioural Sciences on 11 April and will begin his new duties on Monday 18 April.

Japanese media coverage for students' visit

The 1994 visit to Japan for students studying Japanese took place from 10 January to 18 February.

The visit is organised by the University of Wollongong and the Kawasaki International Offices.

Newspaper reporters and photographers covered the visit and students appeared in the Kawasaki International Association News and two students were on a radio program.

Before the second year students left for the trip, they spent time with third year students who shared their experiences of the previous Japan visit.

Co-ordinator of the program, Noriko Dethlefs, organised lunchtime sessions where the students viewed videos on Japan before departure.

While in Japan students stayed with families in or near Tokyo. Most students took turns to cook for their families and gave small gifts from Australia.

The families took students to Mt Fuji and other places outside of Tokyo on weekends which extended their language and cultural studies.

Kawasaki Council had arranged school visits and other excursions for the students.

The group especially enjoyed giving mini classes to the Japanese students.

Each of the schools and factories visited were presented with memento gifts from the University of Wollongong.

Official visits to the Mayor and council were very formal, but the students practised their speeches diligently and presented themselves well.

After classes Noriko's father took students to such places as big book stores, the Toshiba factory, bread factories, temples, Kabuki theatre and fish markets to name a few.

A thank you party for the homestay families was held with the help of the Kawasaki International Office and everyone had a great time sharing meals, singing Australian and Japanese songs, organising games, and each student said a few words about their Japanese families.

The facilities at the International Education Centre in Kawasaki, the sister city of Wollongong, were excellent. Special lectures were presented by lecturers at the centre.

At the end of the class ceremony, students each gave two minute talks. Noriko said that they worked very hard on them and did a wonderful job.

The students also had numerous class written and oral tests but they were encouraged to do activities outside among the Japanese people.

Although some found it difficult in the beginning, they conversed with many Japanese and concluded that it helped their language skills and their confidence in using Japanese.

The only difficulty encountered was that students wanted to go out at nights, but were subject to curfews.

Overall the trip was a great success for everyone involved and a fabulous way for students to spend their summer session.

Scholarship winners Brad Wilsmore and Leanne Wilford with Relationships Manager, National Australia Bank, Wollongong, Gregory Wells.

NAB University Sports scholarships

Three scholarships have been awarded to talented sports men and women of the University of Wollongong.

The scholarships, worth $3000 each were provided by the National Australia Bank.

Relationships Manager of the National's Wollongong branch, Gregory Wells, said, 'The scholarships are a form of the bank's continuing sponsorship and support to the University philosophy of a healthy body, healthy mind.'

Students are selected on the basis of their academic and sporting achievements, their representative team selections, how they can help the university and they must continue to achieve a high standard of sporting excellence.

Winners of the scholarships are Leanne Wilford, Brad Wilsmore and Melanie Dempster.

Ms Dempster, a member of the Australian hockey team that went into camp the night before the presentation, was absent on the day.

Kiama's Ms Wilford is a talented runner with her specialities being the 800m and 1500m events.

She has been selected in the Australian team for the world student cross country championships to be held in Ireland on 2 April.

The scholarship has given her the opportunity to get the University Athletics Club off the ground as it only started at the end of last year.

Leanne hopes to specialise in food research when she has completed her BSc where she is doing majors in nutrition and chemistry.

Mr Wilsmore, from Farmborough Heights, is an outstanding hockey player with a string of high achievements to his credit.

He has been playing hockey for 10 years with his parents also both heavily involved in the sport.

Brad is captain of the NSW under 19 team and a member of the under 21 Academy of Sport team, as well as other local, university and country teams.

He is a second year Human Movement student and as part of the scholarship he will be coaching the University hockey teams.

He hopes to lead them to their first ever winning match.

The National Australia Bank has been providing this kind of sponsorship for students like Leanne, Brad and Melanie for the last 10 years.

Wanted: choristers for Carmina Burana

Carmina Burana by Carl Orff is perhaps one of the most popular classics of the 20th century.

Enjoyed for its exuberance and vitality, the music is known to many through its frequent use in film and television soundtracks.

As part of the Festival of Creative Arts, the University's Music Development Officer, David Vance, will conduct a performance of Carmina Burana on Saturday, 11 June in the Union Hall.

The orchestra will bring together musicians from the RAAF Air Command Band with members of the BHP Youth Orchestra, while the choir combines the forces of The University Singers and the Illawarra Choral Society.

It is intended to augment the choir with singers drawn from the campus and the community to create a chorus of 100 or more voices.

Carl Orff wrote the piece for a large amateur choir, making sure that it would find little difficulty learning the music.

Weekly rehearsals will be held on Mondays from 7.30-10pm beginning April 11.

The performance is scheduled for the holiday weekend, Saturday, 11 June.

If any reader would like to join this chorus, or to have further details, contact David Vance on (042) 21 3591.
