Wollongong Primitive Methodists on Wednesday afternoon, March 2, 1892, attended at the site of the new church being erected in Campbell Street, to witness the laying of four foundation stones.

The church was to be of brick to seat 150 and the stones were laid by Mrs. A. Campbell, Miss Hutson, Mr. C. Plimmer and Mr. W. Ashley.

The report stated that 25 years previously there had been a Primitive Methodist Church but it had been lost by bad management. Services were then suspended until later when a new minister was sent from Sydney.

At the time there were Primitive Methodist churches at Bulli and Mount Kembla. With the union of the Methodist churches early in the twentieth century many were diverted to other uses. The Wollongong Primitive Methodist Church site in Campbell Street was recently cleared up and one of the foundation stones located and used in a building.
