An Aboriginal Education Centre For Wollongong?

by Arthur Smith, Faculty of Education, Institute of Advanced Education.

The University of Wollongong Council recently endorsed a major proposal to establish an *Aboriginal Education* Centre* on campus.

Initially, this new Centre will serve the interests of Aboriginal teacher education and, in time, other areas of the academic programme which attract Aboriginal students. In the long term, any Wollongong University student - Aboriginal or non-Aboriginal - interested in Aboriginal education or related matters might work through or in association with this proposed Centre.

An incorporated Research and Development Unit will foster on-going inquiry into aspects of Aboriginal education and, relatedly, develop Aboriginal studies curricula for use in a wide range of educational settings.

Conceptually, the Centre will involve joint management and development on the part of both Aboriginal and non-aboriginal educators. It is proposed overall, though, that Aboriginal educators will hold key decision-making and leadership roles, particularly in relation to setting overarching direction and emphasis for the new enterprise - from an Aboriginal perspective.

Establishment later this year of an Aboriginal Student Enclave, or support counselling and study advice service for Aboriginal students, will add a dimension to the Centre which will address Aboriginal student needs throughout the University. The 'Enclave' will not only provide physical focus for an increasing Aboriginal presence on campus and a place where students may congregate, it could also become an important clearing house for Aboriginal resources in general, and, potentially, an appropriate meeting ground for students and staff of the University and the local Aboriginal community.

While full details of the rationale for this proposal and its structure may be obtained from the Secretary of the Interim Committee of Council which developed the submission (Ms. Lyn Woodley, Ext. 3918), the following would seem, in outline form, to be the main reasons for generating such an initiative at this time. The views expressed are those of the writer of the University's Proposal, not, necessarily, of The University of Wollongong.

The evidence is clear that needs and aspirations of Aboriginal tertiary students, are by and large, not being adequately catered for by present forms of education. Emerging new programmes (notably Aboriginal Enclaves), which demonstrate high potential for effectiveness, are few in number, understaffed, not adequately funded and, in operation, not incorporated into the academic or social mainstream of institutions which they serve.

HAYDN'S "CREATION" — TICKETS SELLING FAST

Tickets for Haydn's "Creation" are selling fast, including block bookings from Nowra, Bowral and Goulburn.

"The public is responding well both in terms of ticket sales and in terms of donations" said the Executive Officer of Friends, Mr. Giles Pickford.

"The reputation that David Vance has made for himself with "Noah's Flood" and "St. Nicholas" has clearly created an expectation of excellence from the public. We will not disappoint them. The "Creation" promises to be the classical music highlight of the 150th Anniversary" he said.

Ald. Frank Arkell who directed the appeal for Friends donations said that the money was coming in at a steady rate. A further $2,000 has still to come in and he is confident that the Friends will rise to the occasion.

"The University has led the way across a broad range of activities in the region" he said, "and projects like this give our citizens the opportunity to show their appreciation with a donation towards a great cause."

ILLAWARRA CREDIT UNION — ONE OF OUR TOP FRIENDS

The Illawarra Credit Union has provided $8,500 for 17 scholarship winners in 1984. This is the third year that the Illawarra Credit Union has provided such substantial support to the University and it now ranks in the top three cash donors from amongst the Friends of the University of Wollongong.

The scholarships are available to full-time second year students and are awarded on the basis of academic merit achieved in first year.

The 17 scholarship winners will undertake 5 hours of paid work per week in areas related to their studies; so the Academic Departments benefit from these scholarships as well as the students.

The Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Friends, Dr. Ken McKinnon, said that he was very pleased with the support being given by the Illawarra Credit Union to the University.

Recently, there has been a widespread call to encourage increased Aboriginal participation in tertiary education programmes. Yet there are few positive moves to recruit and enrol more Aboriginal students, hire Aboriginal staff or design courses relevant to educational and other needs of Aboriginal Australians.

The tertiary education curriculum, albeit inadvertently, is demonstrably incomplete and inappropriate for most Aboriginal students. This will remain so while ever it is possible in this country to undertake courses of study in, say, Australian history, philosophy, politics, religion, art, language or education, without more than passing reference to the knowledge base, values, cultural mores, traditions or current thought of a people who have lived here for some 40,000 years.

If the argument is accepted that Aboriginal students do not find meaningful or accurate reference to their culture, either before or since European occupation, reflected in courses of study, then provision of suitable educational experience for indigenous Australians becomes an imperative of our time. A system which effectively excludes Aborigines by, amongst other measures, refusing to acknowledge their close, interdependent relationship with the land, their Aboriginality and unique contribution to the history of the region, denies, overall, the right of every Australian to a full and rich intercultural learning experience. Denying Aboriginal identity denies in fundamental terms, Australian identity.

Several recent reports to government(s) have called for radical change to the present system. The National Inquiry into Teacher Education (Auchmuty Report) 1980, Australian Schools' Commission Report, 1975, the Watts' et.al. Review of Research and Development and Related Policies in the Education of Aborigines, 1982, Aboriginal Submissions to the World Conference of Indigenous Peoples, 1981, Australian Government Commission of Inquiry into Aborigines, 1981 and, latterly, the National Aboriginal Education Committee Report: Aborigines and Tertiary Education - A Framework for the 1985-87 Triennium (1984), all attest to the patent lack of appropriate educational opportunity for Aboriginal tertiary students.

In the complex area of assistance to Aboriginal Education the present government and former Fraser governments have, of course, made significant contributions. As far as funding is concerned, though, the charge could nonetheless be made that too little, too late and often inappropriately, has been the case.

During the run up to Australia's Bicentennial, the eyes of the world will be focussed, not only on what 'New Australians' have accomplished in this country during the past 200 years, but on what the effects have been upon its original inhabitants. It will be plain to most observers that the past of a people, deliberately or otherwise, has been all but totally obliterated. What will be inexcusable and well 'nigh impossible to defend will be any charge that Aboriginal Australians are denied reasonable or just access to a future; a future in which they have a predominant decision-making and controlling influence. Meaningful and appropriate education has been cited by many Aboriginal leaders as the key to such a future.

What the situation in tertiary education calls for today is not more charity and paternalism on the part of conscience-salving Australians. It is asking for acceptance of the right of Aboriginal people to participate in the decision-making process that controls their destiny. For too long, white Australians - the controllers of Euro-Australian education - have told Aboriginal people what is best for them. In education, as in other fields, Aborigines now seek opportunity for self-determination. They need to inform other Australians about what they think is appropriate for their young people to learn and experience in schools, colleges and universities.

The slogan of last year's National Aborigines' Week poster - Let's Talk - We have Something to Say - had a very clear message. In education the challenge lies before us. We need to talk and, more importantly, we need to listen. The trend of thought and feeling of a time - the zeitgeist - is apparent. Educators - Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal - in all Australian universities and colleges are faced with the same question: what to do to provide relevant, substantive and meaningful education for Aboriginal students?

Individual staff members of the University of Wollongong have made very significant long term contributions in a number of areas related to Aboriginal Education and Studies. It is my belief, and obviously that of others on campus, that the University's commitment in this area will continue to grow.

* Although the word 'Centre' for the entire overarching concept of the proposed development was used throughout the current Submission, there is apparently some discussion in the University at present as to the appropriateness of this term.

Editor's Note: The University's current proposal has been endorsed by the N.S.W. A.E.C.G. (Aboriginal Education Consultative Group) and Mr. Robert Morgan, Aboriginal Commissioner for Education in N.S.W. and the only Aboriginal member of the H.E.B. (Higher Education Board), as the most far sighted in Australia at present. At a national level our proposal has now become a prototype for discussions around the possibility of setting up an Aboriginal Federated College in N.S.W. by 1988. Wollongong could be the venue.

SPORTS RESEARCH PROGRAMME TO IMPROVE SAFETY AND PERFORMANCE

A scientific analysis of scrummaging techniques used in both rugby union and rugby league will be carried out by experts at Wollongong University under a Sports Science Research Programme announced some weeks ago by the Minister for Sport, Recreation and Tourism, Mr. John Brown.

A further 13 sports will benefit from research into various problems facing their participants to be carried out by tertiary institutions in four States and the Australian Capital Territory.

"The recent focus on rugby injuries means that research into scrummaging techniques for rugby union and rugby league is particularly timely," Mr. Brown said.

"If the experts can come up with new techniques that can reduce injuries but at the same time retain the purpose and function of the scrum then players and spectators alike will benefit, not to mention thousands of concerned parents and coaches."

The total value of the research programme is $153,500 with $88,750 to be spent this financial year.

The largest grant goes to Wollongong University which will receive $40,000 to research the relationship between knee and ankle injuries, shoe design and court surfaces for netball players, while the smallest grant goes to the University of Western Australia for an evaluation of certain physiological factors (glycogen loading) within the energy system which influence the performance of swimmers.

Other sports included in the programme are cricket, hockey, surf life saving, baseball, waterpolo, sailing, softball, touch football, pistol shooting, roller skating and athletics.

"Each of these projects is important in its own way because it has been identified by the national sports organisation concerned as a problem area," Mr. Brown said.

"Australia's top sports scientists will examine the problems and we expect the results to make a significant contribution to the development of these sports."

ILLAWARRA COMMUNITY BROADCASTERS TO HOLD THEIR 4TH TEST TRANSMISSION

During the week of July 8 to July 15 I.C.B. FM will be holding a test transmission, the frequency will be 104.5 MHz, the frequency that the group had been allocated for final use when a license is finally granted.

There are still programme spaces available, and persons interested in presenting programmes should ring the studio (272840) or phone Dr. Hugh Spencer on ext. 3024.

Last test transmission aired a wide variety of programmes, from ethnic-multicultural to popular music, with a considerable amount of time devoted to locally performed music, especially that produced by the Conservatory, as well as by local groups. This test transmission should follow a similar pattern, but with some changes in the timing of programmes to allow wider audience contact with the programmes. This means that programmes such as environmental or folk will be aired at different times on different days, rather than at the same time slot on each day. While this will probably not be the final programming format in the event of a license, one of the purposes of test transmissions is to try out ideas, and it will be interesting to determine audience reaction to it.

I.C.B. would encourage university personnel to become involved in the project. It has the backing of the Friends and the University is a corporate member of the group. Community access radio offers the potential for researchers in the University to present their ideas and projects to the public, and thereby aid the integration of the University with the community.

It is also a marvellous forum - of - the - air for discussion of contentious issues, and in fact any issues of importance to the community.

1984/85 SUMMER SESSION SUBJECT PROPOSALS by Peter Wood - Summer Session Organizer

At its meeting on the 13th June, 1984, the Academic Senate considered the report of the Summer Session Review Committee and endorsed the recommendations contained in the report, except the following:

- Recommendation 3: consideration of which was deferred to the next meeting (dealing with the timing of the Session, noting that it is to be extended to 7 weeks);
- Recommendation 8: which was replaced with -
"that guarantees should be introduced to protect all staff, especially those proceeding to promotion or tenure, from being required to teach in the Summer Session in the event that academic units feel compelled, for whatever reason, to offer Summer Session subjects and that the proposed guarantees be submitted to Senate prior to the commencement of the next Summer Session".

(Copies of the report were circulated as item 29 of the agenda for the meeting - further copies are available from me, if required).

I now seek subjects (both credit and non-credit) for inclusion in the 1984/85 Summer Session from Departments/Schools/individual members of staff.

To meet deadlines for advertising and promotional material, I would need proposals no later than 30th June, 1984. A sheet setting out details required for subject proposals is available.

For any enquiries regarding the Summer Session, please contact me on extension 3943.

MATURE-AGED STUDENTS ASSOCIATION by Sandra Stanely, President

The Mature-Aged Students Association, with its committee of interested students who have long-endured the University system, was formed towards the end of first session this year.

The specific aim of our association is to bring closer contact between all mature-aged students; those recently enrolled to those with degrees and beyond. Through this contact friendship may grow or help be given to any seemingly insurmountable problems, often unknown to, or ignored by, younger students or teaching staff. To this end, our association has already contacted several speakers, from different University departments, who are willing to give a talk and answer any questions at our lunch-time meetings. Notices of these meetings will be posted in prominent places on the campus. Additional speakers will depend on the attendance of all existing and future members at these meetings and their requests for information about the University or their difficulties in any specific area. Membership is free this year with all fees covered by the Union.

Unaware of 21 years and over being the new criteria for acceptance to the University as a 'Mature-Aged Student' our Constitution, which cannot be altered, states that members of our association must be 25 years and over. As President of the Mature-Aged Students' Association, I must apologize for this error but assure those younger mature-aged students that allowances will be made for the membership after consideration by the Committee.

The next function on our Agenda is a barbeque on Tuesday, 31st July. This will be held in the Northern Lounge and its adjoining balcony from 12.00 p.m. to 2.00 p.m. at a cost of $1, to be paid at the Union office. This is a bargain price for a steak and all the trimmings. Please come along and meet the other members and, by joining, helping us to get the Mature-Aged Students Association off to a good start.

Equal Employment Opportunity Project

The Vice-Chancellor will shortly release the University's Policy Statement on Equal Employment Opportunity. Copies will be made available throughout the University. The Policy Statement summarises the University's commitment to Equal Employment Opportunity, including an outline of the Council resolutions on the topic and the membership and terms of Affirmative Action Working Party. In addition the terms "Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action" are outlined, as is the Commonwealth and State discrimination legislation. An outline of the stages in the preparation of the University's Equal Employment Opportunity Management Plan is given and some of the key issues that might be addressed are listed.

The University will not wait till the Management Plan itself is completed and submitted to the N.S.W. Government before taking positive steps towards achieving equality of employment opportunity. As far as possible the University will be moving progressively on implementation. This will, of course, involve moving proposals through the normal University decision-making bodies.

"Affirmative Action for Women" Policy Discussion Paper

By now many members of the University will have read of the release of the "Affirmative Action Green Paper" by the Prime Minister on Tuesday 5 June. The E.E.O. Project is organising to obtain copies to be distributed throughout the University.

There has been considerable debate in the press about the Green Paper and about the pilot programme of affirmative action for women employed in 28 major companies and tertiary institutions. The bodies that agreed to take part in this pilot are: The AMP Society; Ansett Transport Industries Ltd., ANZ Banking Group Ltd; Boral Ltd; Borg-Warner (Australia) Ltd; Castlemaine Tooheys Ltd; G.J. Coles and Coy Ltd; Argyle Diamond Mine Pty. Ltd. and Sulphide Corporation Pty. Ltd., divisions of CRA; CSR Ltd; Dunlop Olympic Ltd; Esso Australia Ltd; John Fairfax and Sons Ltd; Ford Motor Company of Australia Ltd; Mitsubishi Motors Australia Ltd; Reckitt and Colman Australia Ltd; Santos Ltd; Simpson Ltd; South Pacific Hotel Corporation Ltd; Thomas Nationwide Transport Ltd; Unilever Australia Ltd; Westpac Banking Corporation; Woolworths Ltd; Wormald International Ltd; J.B. Young Ltd; The Australian National University; Griffith University, and South Australian College of Advanced Education.

The Green Paper sets out clearly the Commonwealth Government's commitment to encouraging policies which enable women who wish to enter the labour force the opportunity to participate fully in employment. In his preface the Prime Minister acknowledges that

To date, women's skills and talents have not been utilised in our workforce to the fullest extent possible. The country is the poorer for it. This policy Discussion Paper proposes a means of improving the participation of women at all levels and in all sectors of the labour market.

The Green Paper presents material on the nature of Affirmative Action for Women, the need for it to occur, and current measures to improve Women's Labour Market Status. There is clear guidance on how to implement an Affirmative Action Programme and a Summary of the Government's Proposals. In Volume 2 a series of appendices set out the National Labour Consultative Council Guidelines for Employers, statistics on women in the labour market, and an outline of Anti-Discrimination Legislation in Australia.

It is hoped that members of staff throughout the University community will find the discussion paper of interest and value in the context of the University developing its own affirmative action programmes.
