Metallurgy Graduates in Canadian/U.S. Space Project

Two of our metallurgy graduates, Neil Blake and Lynann Clapham are members of Canada's Queen's University team which has won a $200,000 award from the Canadian National Research Council.

The Queen's team has won a chance to conduct an experiment aboard the U.S. space shuttle in 1986.

The award, announced in Ottawa by the National Research Council, caps about 10 years' work for Reg Smith, head of metallurgical engineering at Queen's.

He heads the five-member group which will take advantage of the near zero-gravity conditions on board the shuttle to test whether an aluminium-indium alloy can be made to mix evenly in liquid form.

This is the impossible on earth because gravity causes the two metals to separate, with the indium falling to the bottom.

The opportunity is a special triumph for Smith and his research associate, Wollongong graduate, Neil Blake.

Smith and Blake have been working on experiments leading up to the shuttle test for several years. They have been assisted during the past year by Lynann Clapham, a research student. Lynann Clapham attained the highest mark ever in Wollongong's Metallurgy course.

The Queen's experiment was judged the best of 27 submissions from 18 Canadian universities in the special competition sponsored by Telesat Canada, Spar Aerospace Ltd., and the Research Council.

Contest rules said the experiment had to be small enough to fit in a tiny canister strapped inside the shuttle cargo bay, and simple enough so as not to involve the shuttle's crew.

The Queen's team will develop the experiment and the Research Council will provide the equipment and expertise to prepare it for space.

RESEARCH SUBSIDIES UNDER THE INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT INCENTIVES ACT 1976

Academic Departments should keep in mind when doing IR&D for companies, that the research could be increased by subsidy through Government Grant if Uniadvice is involved.

Uniadvice has recently had some discussions with the relevant authority on the above-named Act. The main points of the Act are related to the Commonwealth Grants for Industrial Research and Development in manufacturing, mining, construction and software production.

1. Commencement Grants - which are "intended to encourage and assist companies, whose IR&D activities have not yet developed to the stage where major projects are being undertaken, to establish or develop a basic capability in industrial research and development"; and
2. Project Grants - which are "payable, at the Board's discretion, in support of particular IR&D projects undertaken by companies with established research and development facilities". Selection criteria apply.

Eligibility for small companies to receive the grant may be given if the work is done through an approved Research Organisation, and Uniadvice is expected to be recognised as such.

SCHOOL OF CREATIVE ARTS LAUNCHES STEINWAY PIANO APPEAL

Professor Edward Cowie, Head of the new School of Creative Arts in Wollongong University has launched a massive appeal for the sum of $43,000 to secure a full Steinway Concert Grand Piano for the Music Auditorium in the School of Creative Arts.

"The Piano has already left Germany by boat," Edward Cowie told me. "Why do we need such an instrument? Well, the defenders of the America's Cup wouldn't put a small sail-boat to sea against the challengers ... now would they? This instrument is a fabulous thing, and will form the 'mainspring' of our concert series for and on behalf of the people of Wollongong."

Professor Cowie mentioned the great support which is growing up in the community, and the influx of very talented students to the School. Internationally famous Artists are now working at the University, and the quality of exhibitions, theatrical performances and concerts has risen way above those dreamt of a year ago.

"This instrument has been offered to us at a third of cost," Professor Cowie stated. "The support of the people of Wollongong is vital right now, if we are to secure the piano when it arrives in Australia. I can promise nothing short of fabulous musical events if we are able to get the money together. To delay now means that we would pay a great deal more for an instrument of less quality than this one," Cowie stated.

"If only one thousand people gave us $40 each, we will have the piano in the hall by August," he said.

A scroll will be prepared with the names of all the donors, which will be placed in a place of honour in the School of Creative Arts' new gallery due to open at the end of this year. What a superb thing it would be if, in the 150th year of its foundation, the people of Wollongong could rise to Professor Cowie's challenge! Cheques should be made out to "School of Creative Arts Piano Appeal", and receipts will be sent out for tax purposes.

Professor Cowie said, "When Beethoven sat down to write all those fabulous piano pieces, I know he would have never dreamt that they could be played on a perfect instrument on the other side of the world! Well, it's up to the people of Wollongong to show us what they want, and how they feel. I have every faith that the appeal will succeed ... the people of Wollongong have risen to such challenges before. I agree with Mayor Arkell when he states that Wollongong is growing up fast ... so let's hope we can provide the tools for the community to prove it."

Donations to be sent to the Secretary, School of Creative Arts Piano Appeal, School of Creative Arts, University of Wollongong, P.O. Box 1144, Wollongong, 2500.

Equal Employment Opportunity Project

The Vice-Chancellor will shortly release the University's Policy Statement on Equal Employment Opportunity. Copies will be made available throughout the University. The Policy Statement summarises the University's commitment to Equal Employment Opportunity, including an outline of the Council resolutions on the topic and the membership and terms of Affirmative Action Working Party. In addition the terms "Equal Employment Opportunity and Affirmative Action" are outlined, as is the Commonwealth and State discrimination legislation. An outline of the stages in the preparation of the University's Equal Employment Opportunity Management Plan is given and some of the key issues that might be addressed are listed.

The University will not wait till the Management Plan itself is completed and submitted to the N.S.W. Government before taking positive steps towards achieving equality of employment opportunity. As far as possible the University will be moving progressively on implementation. This will, of course, involve moving proposals through the normal University decision-making bodies.

"Affirmative Action for Women" Policy Discussion Paper

By now many members of the University will have read of the release of the "Affirmative Action Green Paper" by the Prime Minister on Tuesday 5 June. The E.E.O. Project is organising to obtain copies to be distributed throughout the University.

There has been considerable debate in the press about the Green Paper and about the pilot programme of affirmative action for women employed in 28 major companies and tertiary institutions. The bodies that agreed to take part in this pilot are: The AMP Society; Ansett Transport Industries Ltd., ANZ Banking Group Ltd; Boral Ltd; Borg-Warner (Australia) Ltd; Castlemaine Tooheys Ltd; G.J. Coles and Coy Ltd; Argyle Diamond Mine Pty. Ltd. and Sulphide Corporation Pty. Ltd., divisions of CRA; CSR Ltd; Dunlop Olympic Ltd; Esso Australia Ltd; John Fairfax and Sons Ltd; Ford Motor Company of Australia Ltd; Mitsubishi Motors Australia Ltd; Reckitt and Colman Australia Ltd; Santos Ltd; Simpson Ltd; South Pacific Hotel Corporation Ltd; Thomas Nationwide Transport Ltd; Unilever Australia Ltd; Westpac Banking Corporation; Woolworths Ltd; Wormald International Ltd; J.B. Young Ltd; The Australian National University; Griffith University, and South Australian College of Advanced Education.

The Green Paper sets out clearly the Commonwealth Government's commitment to encouraging policies which enable women who wish to enter the labour force the opportunity to participate fully in employment. In his preface the Prime Minister acknowledges that

To date, women's skills and talents have not been utilised in our workforce to the fullest extent possible. The country is the poorer for it. This policy Discussion Paper proposes a means of improving the participation of women at all levels and in all sectors of the labour market.

The Green Paper presents material on the nature of Affirmative Action for Women, the need for it to occur, and current measures to improve Women's Labour Market Status. There is clear guidance on how to implement an Affirmative Action Programme and a Summary of the Government's Proposals. In Volume 2 a series of appendices sets out the National Labour Consultative Council Guidelines for Employers, statistics on women in the labour market, and an outline of Anti-Discrimination Legislation in Australia.

It is hoped that members of staff throughout the University community will find the discussion paper of interest and value in the context of the University developing its own affirmative action programmes.

GRAHAM GALLERY

The Graham Gallery has been open since October, 1981. Located at historical Mount Kembla it fulfils a growing need and has brought something new into the area. It is the product of years of experience and the dreams of its director, Coralie Barr. It is the culmination of her secretarial, administrative and art training.

The gallery area is 624 square feet in total exhibition space. A very active schedule has resulted in changing monthly exhibitions and a wide variety of stock.

The exhibition programme offers a major event each month and a special pre-Christmas exhibition and sale.

1984/85 exhibitions will show work by Joan Harvey, Dora Kiwi, Gino Sanguinetti, Bob Baker, Edward Cowie, Karl Preuhs, Gem Flood, Robyn Jeffcoat, Wendy Vaughan, and Lucia Dessi.

Coralie has found that paintings, ceramics and glass are the major local interest areas. She feels public response has been excellent and continues to grow at a remarkable pace. In a sense the Gallery may be seen as a symbol of a way of life previously not well served in the area but certainly one that is desired, that is, one rich in cultural experience.

Coralie's philosophy is to stimulate and maintain a professionally run gallery which does not compromise in its contribution to the promotion and marketing of fine art and craftworks nor in its demand for a high standard of work.

The gallery was established to make a positive contribution to the Illawarra community.

Happily an increasing number of nationally and locally known artists and crafts people now list Graham Gallery as a work outlet - thus the contribution may indeed be seen as a positive one for the Gallery.
