Wollongong serving international robotic challenge

THE ABC TV Quantum program recently featured a robotic machine — designed and manufactured by a University of Wollongong company — that has solved an automation challenge for Qantas.

Thanks to this company, the Automation and Engineering Applications Centre (AEAC) Ltd, economy class travellers on Qantas aircraft leaving Sydney will be served with meals that have been set by a robotic machine.

The machine, now in production operation at the Qantas Flight Catering Centre in Sydney, handles very large numbers of cups, glasses, bowls, mats, serviettes and food items and accurately places them on trays.

These trays are later loaded on to aircraft and ultimately delivered to passengers by cabin crew.

There had been several unsuccessful attempts by overseas organisations to perform the same work.

AEAC was founded in 1983 by electrical and computer engineer Chris Cook, now a Professor of Electrical Engineering at this University.

It has designed and installed several robotic automation systems for Australian industry since then.

The Qantas system is of particular interest because it uses leading-edge, but simple, technology to produce a cost-effective practical solution to setting large numbers of meals.

As a result of this system being installed, Qantas is able to produce many more meals, despite having no more physical space available for expansion.

The system is operated by the same people who previously did all the work by hand.

During the commissioning of the system at Wollongong University, operators were brought in for formal training on the system and the relevant trade unions were also involved at early design stages.

Comments from experienced Qantas Catering Centre operators were incorporated by the design engineers to ensure a safe, easy-to-use, reliable system.

The success of the system has resulted in delegations from many overseas airlines visiting Qantas and AEAC to investigate the possibilities of AEAC exporting this technology.

It is hoped that substantial export orders will follow in the near future.

AEAC's success illustrates that:

a) Universities, and in the area of industrial automation, particularly the University of Wollongong, have an important role to play in modernising our industry to improve its competitiveness.

b) A degree in Electrical and Computer Engineering is good preparation for a career in leading-edge technology and is also good preparation for business management. (Three of the largest companies in the Illawarra Technology Centre were founded by, or are directed by, electrical and computer engineers)

c) Industrial automation systems are readily accepted by the workforce, provided adequate consultation and training are given at all stages of design and manufacture.

d) There is no reason why Australia should not be producing its fair share of the world's best ideas and implementing these ideas in industry. Rather than being surprised that world-beating ideas should come from Australia, our confidence in the quality of our training and in the calibre of our engineers and designers should make us surprised when we find a good idea that did not come from Australia!

Japanese studies available at Wollongong next year

FROM next year, the University of Wollongong is introducing a new course in Japanese and Japanese studies.

Japanese Language and Culture Studies will be a major in the Bachelor of Arts.

There will also be a five-year course combining the Bachelor of Arts majoring in Japanese with a Bachelor of Commerce.

It is planned that there will be more than 2500 hours tuition in Japanese. The course will use computer-aided instruction with new language and computer laboratories.

The Department of Modern Languages plans the extensive use of Summer Session courses, with Kawasaki, Japan, hopefully the location of the second Summer Session course.

It is also planned for one or two semesters' study at a Japanese University. There will be 50 places available in 1991 — 30 in BCom/BA and 20 in BA.

An active fundraising campaign has started to provide scholarships to assist with travel and residence costs in Japan.

Graduation Day will celebrate achievements of 270 graduands

THE OCTOBER Graduation ceremony will be held this year on Friday October 12 in the Sports Hall.

The ceremony will begin at 10am and is expected to end at 12-12.30pm. Approximately 270 graduands from all faculties will receive their awards from the Chancellor, the Hon RM Hope.

The Chancellor will also confer five honorary awards.

An honorary degree of Doctor of Science will be conferred on Mr Franco Belgiorno-Nettis, Chairman of Transfield Limited and a distinguished engineer and patron of the arts.

The Occasional Address will be delivered by the Hon. Franca Arena, member of the NSW Legislative Council.

This ceremony will celebrate the achievements of all graduands and also pay a special tribute to the contributions made by the region's ethnic communities with which many of the University's staff, students and friends share a common heritage.

The Sports Hall is expected to be full on the day.

Guests will be admitted by ticket and are asked to be seated 10 minutes before the ceremony.

The appropriate forms and tickets have been forwarded to all graduands. Academic staff have also received invitations and have been asked to return the appropriate form if they want to participate.

For further information about the ceremony, please contact Trevor Cuthbertson, ext. 3928 or Olena Cullen ext. 3360.

Watch for an influx of prospective students

THE NUMBER of potential students visiting the campus should increase over the upcoming school holidays from September 24 to October 5 and after the HSC examinations.

Year 10, 11 and 12 students have been encouraged to come. They have been asked to start at the Student Enquiry Counter and then to visit faculty offices and the departments they are interested in. Liz Hilton, Schools Liaison Officer, said the value of a warm reception cannot be overstated.

Engineering students honoured for their theses

TWO final-year Mechanical Engineering students recently were rewarded for the efforts expended so far on their theses.

At a student presentation night conducted in Sydney by the Society of Manufacturing Engineers, Craig Pilt delivered a talk on his thesis entitled 'A Robot Application in the Ultra-Sonic Evaluation of Manufactured Components', and Craig Croxton spoke about his thesis entitled 'Automatic Welding for Maintenance and Repair of Gear Teeth'.

After some close judging, based mainly on manner and style of presentation, Pilt was awarded second prize, a $150 cheque, and Croxton won third prize, a $75 cheque. Peter Dyball, from the University of Technology, Sydney, was first.

Pilt and Croxton are supervised by Dr Elias Siores.

Law course transfer applications close soon

STUDENTS intending to apply to transfer to Law courses must apply through the Universities Admissions Centre (UAC), Locked Bag 500, Lidcombe NSW 2141.

Application forms are available from the Student Enquiries Office and the closing date for applications is September 28.

Application forms for transfer to all other courses are available at the Student Enquiries Office and must be returned to the University of Wollongong by January 11, 1991.

Dr Keith Johns invited to Moscow Conservatorium

TEACHER on the piano staff of Wollongong Conservatorium of Music, Dr Keith Johns, has been invited to work at Moscow Conservatorium of Music as Guest-Professor in February 1991.

While at the Moscow Conservatorium, the most important music school in the USSR, Dr Johns will give recitals and lecture-recitals, lecture in musicology and ethnomusicology, and lead master classes.

Dr Johns, a virtuoso pianist and musicologist, is well-known throughout the world's concert halls and best music institutions as a pianist and musician who blends the insights of original musicological research with the passion of the intuitive artist.

In January-February he will make his third world concert tour, with invitations from the Franz Liszt Museum in Budapest, the Czechoslovakian concert agency in Prague, and music institutions in Europe, England and the USA.

'The invitation to work at Moscow Conservatorium of music as Guest Professor is indeed an honour,' Dr Johns said.

Creative Arts academics to exhibit in Florence

TWO academics from the School of Creative Arts have been invited to exhibit their work at the prestigious Teorema Gallery in Florence.

The gallery is owned by the Masini family, who have been managing private galleries in Florence from the middle of last century.

Senior Lecturer Dr Peter Shepherd will be showing a series of drawings and oil paintings, and Lindsay Duncan will show ceramic sculptures featuring the lustre and black-firing techniques that he has been recently researching.

They will be joined for the exhibition by Korean sculptor Tae Hwa Choi.

Ms Choi is one of Korea's best-known contemporary sculptors, who has been working at the Ceramics Institute at Sesto Fiorentino in Italy for some time, and exhibits regularly both in Italy and her homeland.

Dr Shepherd and Mr Duncan have been invited to work in the Verdaccio Studios near Siena for two months, and the director of the gallery in Florence, when shown some of their latest work, requested that they exhibit in her gallery in October.

It is the first time Australian artists have been represented in the exhibitions of the gallery. Invitations to exhibit in this "city of the arts" are very hard to gain, and it is a definite coup for our two academics.

Dr Shepherd is involved in various forms of art-making, painting and drawing, performing as a musician, conducting orchestral and stage performances, and directing for the theatre.

The form varies from time to time, but he sees it all as the exploration of forms of expression, which are personally meaningful, and which hopefully succeed in communicating something to others.

Since 1984, his visual work has dealt with the exploration of male identity.

Lindsay Duncan is producing sculptures which reflect his investigation in the area of gender representation in the visual arts, and specifically the redefinition of masculinity in 20th century western culture.

After their time in Italy, the two Wollongong artists have been invited to work with Swiss painter and performance artist Helen Spoerri in the Stock Atelier in Berlin, where they will also give a series of talks on their work to this community of Berlin artists.

Dr Shepherd is then to go to the National Theatre in London to work with the director on two new productions for 1991.

Staff development leave

THE DEVELOPMENT Leave for General Staff Scheme is designed to enable a staff member to complete a program of study and/or visits which will result in benefits to both the staff member and University.

A member of staff whose application has been successful will be entitled to salary while on leave and the cost of travel and accommodation will be paid.

Leave can be taken in Australia and overseas and will not normally exceed three months.

The scheme is competitive and applicants must be able to demonstrate significant personal development and substantial benefits to the University from their proposed program.

All members of general staff are entitled to apply.

Full details on terms and conditions of leave and a suggested application format can be obtained from Robyn Weekes, ext. 3929.

Applications for 1991 will close on October 15 and should be addressed to the University Secretary.

Personnel re-organisation completed

THE re-organisation of the Personnel Services Branch office space has been completed.

But, according to senior Personnel Officer, Robyn Weekes, many people are having trouble finding the new work areas.

She said the entrance to the old Salaries Office has been sealed and there is just one common entrance to the Branch.

'Understandably many people are now having trouble finding the Salary and Safety service areas,' she said.

'If you want to see any member of Personnel Services Branch please use the remaining entrance (located near the Southern entrance to the Administration Building) and the receptionist will direct you to the appropriate person.

If you are still wondering where the Salaries Office has disappeared to, you will find it by turning right then heading east after entering the Branch.'

She said the Academic Staff Unit is in the north-eastern corner of the same office.

The General Staff and Safety Units can be found by turning left on entering the office and heading north.

Linda Viney on Psychologists' Board

ASSOCIATE Professor Linda Viney of the Department of Psychology is about to take up her appointment for a two-year term to the Psychologists' Registration Board of NSW.

The Psychologists Act which it administers is being brought into use this year, many years after registration of psychological practitioners has been introduced in other states.

'NSW psychologists are delighted that the protection of such an act is at last being provided for clients,' Associate Professor Viney said.

The Board grants registration only to people of good character, who have a recognised three-year degree from an Australian university (or its overseas equivalent), followed by an approved higher degree in professional psychology or two years of professional practice or research.
