Our First Fulbright Visitor

The University's first distinguished visitor under the Fulbright Visiting Scholar Scheme has started work at the University in the Department of Biology. His visit was organized by the Australian American Educational Foundation.

The Scholar is Theodore (Ted) Garland Jr. Dr. Garland attained a Bachelor of Science in Zoology (1978) and a Master of Science in Biology from the University of Nevada, Las Vegas (1980) before beginning his Ph.D studies in the Department of Ecology and Evolutionary Biology at the University of California, Irvine in 1980. He is now in the fourth year of his Ph.D studies.

He has travelled to Costa Rica, Central America and Kenya and Tanzania to conduct ecological research.

He was born in Pennsylvania in 1956, but grew up in Las Vegas, Nevada.

In writing about his research programme Dr. Garland made the following comments:

"My research interests concern the evolution of body size in mammals and reptiles, and the reptile-to-mammal transition. I wish to understand why different species are the size they are (i.e., what have been the selective factors acting to produce a given pattern of variation in body size), and what were the selective factors that favoured the evolution of mammals from reptiles some 200 million years ago. My techniques are those of physiological ecology, which means I conduct field studies of animal behaviour, laboratory studies of metabolic biochemistry, and a variety of things in between."

"While in Australia, I will focus on locomotory performance of lizards. Animals captured alive in the field are performance tested in the lab. on a photocell-timed racetrack, to obtain maximal acceleration and burst speed, and on a motorized treadmill run at low speeds (about 1 km/h), to quantify endurance. Through field studies I then attempt to elucidate the behavioural correlates and ecological consequences of interspecific variation in performance ability. With lab. studies I attempt to identify the morphological, physiological, and biochemical bases for variation in performance among species as well as among individuals within species. These lab. studies parallel in several ways studies of human performance, and many of my a priori hypotheses are based on previous studies of mammalian exercise physiology. I study lizards because they are in many ways a more convenient group with which to work, and because I have a long-standing interest in reptiles."

"I have come to Australia because it offers the greatest diversity of lizards. I chose the University of Wollongong so that Dr. A.J. (Tony) Hulbert and I could conduct collaborative studies -- we are both interested in the reptile-mammal transition, but have different approaches. Dr. Hulbert and I met in 1981 while he was on study leave at the University of California, Irvine, my home institution."

BRAIN DRAIN REVERSED

After a period of severe "brain-drain" of Australian computer scientists to overseas destinations, a little reverse "brain-drain" is taking place in Wollongong.

Professor John E.L. Peck, Professor of Computer Science at the University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada, has accepted a Visiting Professor's position in the Department of Computing Science. Prof. Peck hopes to take up his position in February 1984.

Prof. Peck has had a distinguished career in Computing Science. He is perhaps best known for his contributions to the development of the programming language ALGOL68 in the late 1960's. More recently Prof. Peck has taken interest in Software Tools, portable programmes and microcomputer systems.

These interests will complement work already in progress at Wollongong. We welcome this distinguished computer scientist to our shores and look forward to an exciting period of scientific collaboration.

CHINESE ACADEMICS VISIT WOLLONGONG

A Delegation of Chinese Academics from some of the leading Technological Universities in China visited Wollongong last week.

Their itinerary took in the University and a tour of heavy industry.

The Chinese Delegation expressed interest in examining the training conditions in Australia in tertiary education, especially in the field of engineering.

They were also interested in studying the relationship between higher education and the economy as a whole.

It is likely they will be also considering the possibility of exchanges of academic staff between China and Australia.

The Vice-Chancellor of the University, Dr. Ken McKinnon hosted their visit to the University.

Book of the Week

From Chris Wilder, University Co-op Bookshop

HERGE: THE ADVENTURES OF TINTIN

It is now fifty years since Herge published his first cartoon adventure of the plucky detective Tintin and his friends The Captain, Professor Calculus, Nestor and hosts of dastardly enemies.

To mark Tintin's fiftieth "birthday", we have in stock all the Tintin books available, including the classic pre-war titles. All titles are $3.95.

Also available this week: the "Penguin Complete Saki" (with an introduction by Noel Coward) for $9.95; Mervyn Peake's "Gormenghast" trilogy: $12.95; the "Penguin Complete Novels" ($11.95) and "Short Stories" ($9.95) of Kafka, and Jim Falk's "Taking Australia Off The Map" ($6.95).

During November and December members of the Co-op (shareholders) receive a 10% discount on all book purchases (other than nett books, which number about five titles!). This represents a very substantial saving on general books as well as texts.

CORRECTION

In last weeks "Campus News" the Editor stated that the University had budgetted $2,500 for Open Day.

This is incorrect. No amount was "budgetted". Instead a "contribution" of $5,000 was made. This takes the amount spent per visitor from 3 cents to 5½ cents.

There was no intention to mislead. The error arose from a lack of comprehension of the University's financial system.

INSTALLATION OF PABX TELEPHONE SYSTEM

The anticipated date of cut-over of the new PABX was previously advised as 17th October, 1983.

The equipment has only recently been delivered and Telecom advise that the anticipated date of cut-over is now the end of October.

Readers will be advised when a more definite date is known.

MEDICARE AND STUDENTS (INCLUDING OVERSEAS STUDENTS IN AUSTRALIA)

The following information has been supplied by the Department of Health:

"Under Medicare every Australian will be covered for doctors' fees and public hospital care. Doctors will have the choice of billing Medicare direct for all their patients or charging the patient direct.

Medicare will be funded by a one percent income tax contribution. The income level below which the levy is not payable is $128.80 gross per week for a single person and $214.25 gross per week for a couple with an additional $21 per week allowed for each dependent child. These limits will apply to everyone in Australia, including students, postgraduate and undergraduate.

Under Medicare, overseas students (sponsored or private) who have approval to remain in Australia for more than six months will be entitled to Medicare benefits from the date of their arrival in Australia. Those students who originally obtain approval to stay less than six months and who subsequently receive an extension which makes their total stay in Australia longer than six months will also be eligible for Medicare benefits from the date the extension is granted.

Those students whose stay in Australia is less than six months will not be eligible for Medicare benefits and should consider taking out private health insurance which may be available to visitors to Australia from private health insurance organisations."

UNESCO PARTICIPATION PROGRAMME

The AVCC has advised that UNESCO is calling for applications for grant support for conferences or seminars which support the objectives of UNESCO. Details are displayed on the Campus News Notice Board.

BOARD OF SENIOR SCHOOL STUDIES

The Board has determined that the 1983 Higher School Certificate Result Notices will be dispatched to candidates on Friday, 13 January, 1984, so as to reach them on or about Monday, 16 January.

This procedure reflects the additional checking processes now incorporated into the finalization of Higher School Certificate results, but conforms to the Board's view that candidates should receive their individual results as soon as is practicable.

It should be noted that the normal revision process will still apply, and that as in previous years, this may take five to six weeks to complete.

The Universities and Colleges Admissions Centre, other tertiary institutions and interested parties have been advised of the above procedures.

STATE SUPERANNUATION BOARD HOUSING LOAN INTEREST RATES

The State Superannuation Board wishes to inform Fund member borrowers and applicants for housing finance, that the interest rates attaching to housing loans provided from the Fund, have been reduced by 0.25% per annum, effective from 3rd October, 1983.

The new rates applying are 11.75% for loans less than $50,000 and 12.75% for loans of $50,000 or more. The rate attaching to loans to ex-Fund members, irrespective of amount, is also 12.75% per annum.

Borrowers may elect to seek reduced repayments by contacting the Secretary of the housing co-operative which provided the loan. Alternatively, they may wish to leave existing re-payments stand, thereby effecting savings in overall interest.

Letters

Dear Editor,

I was recently invited to HMAS Creswell to lecture on the literature of the Cold War period. In the ward room was a portrait of Nelson, but I saw no portrait of Nepean. Calling to mind the growing interest in our local heritage, I pondered upon this during my drive back to Wollongong. By the time I reached Nowra I had thoroughly approved the judgement of the naval college in not embarrassing Nelson with the companionship of the man after whom one of our local rivers had the misfortune to be named.

Evan Nepean was Secretary to the Admiralty in 1797, when the naval ratings seized the two home fleets of the British Navy, expelled their officers, hoisted the red flag and blockaded the Thames. After 'the floating republic' had been overthrown and its elected President, Richard Parker, arrested, Nepean instructed Parker's judges, "You may prove almost anything you like against him". The President of the Court that condemned Parker to death wrote back to Nepean, "The conviction of the villain Parker must have been so very dear to you at the Admiralty that the place and time of his execution might have been previously settled."

Parker and twenty-nine others were executed in Marshalsea prison, later pulled down to make way for a post-office building, at which time the place was renamed Mount Pleasant after which doubtless the Wollongong suburb was named. Many more rebels were flogged and others were transported to New South Wales.

The reforms which the ratings had sought from the Admiralty, the refusal and manner of refusal of which had led to the uprising, were shortly implemented. They would not have been introduced but for the uprising and the fear of the future uprisings. Without them, paid for so dearly by ordinary seamen, the Royal Navy would have been in no condition to win at Camperdown and later at Trafalgar, there would have been no column in Trafalgar Square - indeed no Trafalgar Square - and no portrait in the ward room of HMAS Creswell. There would, of course, have been the Nepean River and Mount Pleasant.

It crossed my mind, as I left Nowra, that to name a local river after Nepean and one of Wollongong's more prestigious suburbs after a London sorting office was evidence of that cringe before the power of the British ruling class which many Australians deplore in their own cultural make-up. Whilst not for a moment questioning a proper respect for Her Majesty and Her Majesty's Australian Navy, could we not rename the Nepean after one of the 1979 ratings transported to Australia, say Thomas McCann, and Mount Pleasant after the Marshalsea prison in honour of the selves who laid the material foundations of European settlement?

Yours sincerely,
Raymond Southall,
Professor of English.
