

REMINISCENCES OF THE IHS

by

Alice Musgrave

The Early Days and those who did so much to help:

Essie Mackreth, who asked me to become a member, was a very active member - as was Margaret Evans.

And who could forget the work done by Bill Bayley and Alec Fleming with their many publications and research into the early history and the contributions made to the Bulletin by Bill McDonald and Edgar Beale.

Ken Thomas with the Blacksmith's shop and the hard work of Fred Healy, George Boniface, Frank Osborne and John Maynes and Mary Howells always ready to help.

Joyce McCarthy and Amelia Pezzutto, both with young children in those days, have given wonderful support to the society.

Phllis de Jersey and Margaret McDonald contributed so much to the Society.

Of course, a lot of these people are still very active. I am only talking about the early days and realize there are a lot of dedicated people whom I have not mentioned and some whom I do not know carrying on the good work.
