GUILLAUME’S LOOM, HASTINGS, 1080

I made a loom for Mathilda, my English daughter. Mathilde! I called. I wanted to show her
The strong clay rings I’d made to hold the thread
As hard and near as I held her. I wasn’t proud
Of the rest – a rough affair of stick and thole
Cut from the worst English wood, I think hazel,
And English wool.

HER FATHER IN THE PATIENTS’ GARDEN,
NEWCASTLE BOROUGH LUNATIC ASYLUM, 1919

I am not lost. I harbour my loneliness here
By the larkspur. Here, where the hand of my daughter,
Margaret’s hand in hard love, took my elbow –
The smell of the ward’s in my hair.
Behind me now, the black clocktower, the wall –
O God, our ... God, reported missing and presumed, etcetera,
When they built that wall.
I’ll take my soul and sixpence when I go.
I’ll go to Muriel, though she is laid
Aside. My mother, Dad, my mother’s ... Margaret said.
The stones of the path in the patients’ garden –
Narrow then wide, narrow then wide.

Note: The hospital, taken over by the Ministry of War during World War I, is now known as St Nicholas’ Hospital.
