University of Wollongong

Research Online

Faculty of Social Sciences - Papers (Archive)

Faculty of Arts, Social Sciences & Humanities

2016

A tribute to Doreen Massey (3 January 1944-11 March 2016)

Noel Castree

University of Wollongong, ncastree@uow.edu.au

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ro.uow.edu.au/sspapers>

Part of the Education Commons, and the Social and Behavioral Sciences Commons

Research Online is the open access institutional repository for the University of Wollongong. For further information contact the UOW Library: research-pubs@uow.edu.au

A tribute to Doreen Massey (3 January 1944-11 March 2016)

Abstract

Great people not only make waves during their lifetime; they continue to influence and inspire others long after they have gone. Doreen Massey's passing is hard to bear, but her large and extraordinarily rich legacy will endure. She was a truly exceptional geographer and one, moreover, esteemed far beyond her chosen discipline. She was a philosopher, empirical researcher, educator, political activist and, in recent years, a public intellectual. Her geography knew few topical bounds, spanning the economic, political, cultural and even physical parts of the subject. Her theoretical-political lenses were equally wide angle, but avowedly of the Left. She authored not just one or two formative publications but many; her numerous books, articles and chapters changed the way we understand the world and our place in it. She was a superb communicator: her lectures and seminars could be riveting, while her written English was full of memorable formulations. She was as committed to student education as she was to scholarship; she valued political commentary as much as abstract theorizing (and, to that end, helped set up Soundings with Stuart Hall and Michael Rustin in 1995). She was a high-energy, multi-talented individual and a frequent collaborator, generous with her time and ideas. She was also principled and - when occasion called for it - fearless. Throughout her remarkable life she showed us what it means to be a politically committed scholar for whom research, pedagogy, activism and public engagement are all connected organically.

Keywords

doreen, massey, tribute, 2016, january, 1944, 11, march, 3

Disciplines

Education | Social and Behavioral Sciences

Publication Details

Castree, N. (2016). A tribute to Doreen Massey (3 January 1944-11 March 2016). Progress in Human Geography: an international review of geographical work in the social sciences and humanities, 40 (5), 585-592.

A tribute to Doreen Massey (3 January 1944-11 March 2016)

Noel Castree, University of Wollongong, New South Wales, Australia*

Great people not only make waves during their lifetime; they continue to influence and inspire others long after they have gone. Doreen Massey's passing is hard to bear, but her large and extraordinarily rich legacy will endure. She was a truly exceptional geographer and one, moreover, esteemed far beyond her chosen discipline. She was a philosopher, empirical researcher, educator, political activist and, in recent years, a public intellectual. Her geography knew few topical bounds, spanning the economic, political, cultural and even physical parts of the subject. Her theoretical-political lenses were equally wide angle, but avowedly of the Left. She authored not just one or two formative publications but many; her numerous books, articles and chapters changed the way we understand the world and our place in it. She was a superb communicator: her lectures and seminars could be riveting, while her written English was full of memorable formulations. She was as committed to student education as she was to scholarship; she valued political commentary as much as abstract theorising (and, to that end, helped set-up Soundings with Stuart Hall and Michael Rustin in 1995). She was a high energy, multi-talented individual and a frequent collaborator generous with her time and ideas. She was also principled and – when occasion called for it – fearless. Throughout her remarkable life she showed us what it means to be a politically committed scholar for whom research, pedagogy, activism and public engagement are all connected organically.

Doreen Massey was raised on the outskirts of Manchester, England. Born into a working class family as the second war ended, she gained entry to what then – far more than now – was one of Britain's most famously exclusive establishments (Oxford University). She graduated with an honours degree in Geography in the mid-1960s. Later she undertook a masters in regional science at the University of Pennsylvania. By then she had joined a research-based think tank funded by the British government (the Centre for Environmental Studies, situated in London). There she began to formulate some of the ideas that would soon mark her out as a rising star in academic Geography. Her institutional route-way back into university life also began during her CES period, first at the Polytechnic of Central London (as it was then called) and later at the London School of Economics. She joined the Open University not long after the Centre lost its central funding in 1979. She remained there the rest of her career, retiring in 2009 after 27 years of service.

It was during her initial period as a part-time LSE geographer that she published a germinal piece of writing, the paper 'In what sense a regional problem?' (in Regional Studies, 1979). It connected political economy with geographical form and was among the key publications responsible for making Marxist geography a preferable approach to 'industrial location theory' when seeking to understand regional growth and uneven development. Three years later she co-published The anatomy of job loss (1982) with her CES colleague Richard Meegan (the second book she authored with him). This text showed that unemployment could not be explained by looking chiefly at the locational characteristics of industries; much also depended on wider corporate strategy, overseas competition, broader government policy and a plethora of other extra-local factors. In 1984, building this, she published the highly influential Spatial divisions of labour. It soon became one of the foundational studies for geographical political economy in its Marxian form, complementing without at all aping key works by David Harvey, Neil Smith and others in the early-to-mid 1980s.

Writing on a broader front, the next year she also published a now classic chapter on space and social relations in a now classic edited book by Derek Gregory and John Urry (1985). That same year she and Richard Meegan co-edited the excellent Politics and method (1985). This was an early demonstration of how geographical research is political all the way down and normatively implicated in that which it purports merely to 'describe and explain'. Unlike some previous abstract claims to this effect by others in Geography, she and Richard's contributors were able to show this concretely.

Doreen's work during this period was infused with a deep concern about class inequality in the UK and beyond, and the geographical patterning of this inequality. A critic of empiricism and the idea of value-neutrality, she demonstrated the importance of making conscious theoretical choices and testing their robustness against bodies of (value-laden) evidence. But by the early 1990s, influenced by feminist thinking in Geography and beyond, she began to extend her own Marxism and challenge that of some of her peers both conceptually and politically. Her fine collection of essays Space, place, and gender (1994) was both a provocation and an incitement. It showed the limits of orthodox Marxism when applied to problems of inequality and injustice as manifested geographically. It encouraged older and younger 'radical geographers' (as they were still then called) to consider multiple axes of socio-spatial difference when seeking to both interpret and improve a world full of problems. Some of its themes had been trailed in her combative engagement with David Harvey's historical-geographical materialism (her paper 'Flexible sexism', in the journal Society and Space [1991a]).

Around this time Doreen turned her attention squarely to the concept of place, elaborating ideas that, in nascent form, had appeared in her 'regional problem' paper and The anatomy of job loss. She provided a way of thinking about place that was complex, porous and relational. Her way of approaching the subject, informed by involvement in ESRC funded research into the restructuring of the British space economy, anticipated many of the later disciplinary debates about 'glocalisation'. She used a similar conceptual framework to understand regional change, specifically in the south east of England (Allen et al., 1998), adding-in lots of evidence to demonstrate the explanatory power of the ideas. Through all this she gave us a way to mediate the unique-general/idiographic-nomothetic dualisms so as to yield explanatory and political benefits for Left-leaning geography (by then becoming known as 'critical human geography'). In the case of Rethinking the region, this involved a powerful demonstration of how neoliberal policies had remade the greater London area as part of a global reconstitution of economic and social life.

In her many pivotal writings about place and region, she provided concepts that would soon become part of human geography's analytical repertoire – notably a 'global sense of the local' and 'power geometries'. But as the 1990s progressed she increasingly wove these into a broader conception the spatio-temporal constitution of life and matter. Here she elaborated ideas first expressed in a New Left Review paper (Massey [1992], republished as the closing chapter of Space, place and gender) and in her chapter in Gregory and Urry's book (Massey, 1985). Not only did she insist on the complex unity of space and time, so too their inherence in objects, relationships and identities; she also detailed their political qualities over and above those that David Harvey, Neil Smith and other Marxist geographers had done so much to highlight. At the turn of the millennium she captured all this in what, for me, is her most stimulating (but perhaps least available) book, Power-geometries and the politics of space-time (1999a). It's a post-Marxist statement that represents her geographical engagement with the work of Ernesto Laclau and Chantal Mouffe, among others. It is both hard headed and optimistic, having been written at a time of neoliberalism ascendant but also lots of citizens of agitating in Seattle and elsewhere for a new world order.

In the years leading up to her retirement from the Open University she remained extraordinarily active in all parts of her multifaceted life. She continued to coedit Soundings until 2004, a British journal that bridged the academic and wider Left (and continues to do so). With OU colleagues she continued to produce first rate degree modules, with superb supporting material (see, for instance, Material geographies: a world in the making (Clark et al., 2008]). Her long-standing interest in the politics of difference and the politics of geography found expression in Cities for the many not the few

(with Nigel Thrift and Ash Amin, 2000). She continued to write insightfully about the geography of her adopted metropolitan region, at a time when her friend Ken Livingstone was mayor of London (Massey, 2007a). World city attended to the specifics of England's capital while offering a wider commentary on the ills of neoliberal capitalism. As if all this were not enough, she published her most complete statement on the nature and importance of geography, For space (2005). It moves beyond her previous attempts at conceptual weaving by stitching questions of physical environment and matter into her very large intellectual canvas. This enlarging of her worldview had been presaged six years earlier in a Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers article (Massey, 1999b). That essay re-energised the tired debate about the relationship between the two 'halves' of academic Geography.

This list of her writings and activities across four decades is selective. Difficult though it is to believe, she did more – a lot more (including, in her final years, co-authoring the Kilburn Manifesto for a new progressive politics in the UK and beyond: this saw her playing the role of public intellectual with aplomb). Yet she rarely published in Progress in Human Geography. Her most substantial contribution was an essay on how the discipline of Geography, geographical thinking and public policy intersect (or, as she argues, fail to: Massey, 2001). It was based on one of the journal's first annual lectures. It garnered a response and she, in turn, responded (Massey, 2002). Beyond this, Progress organised reflective commentaries on her books Spatial Divisions of Labour (first edition)¹ and For Space. In each case she penned graceful and interesting replies (see Massey, 2007). But of course the measure of Doreen's influence on Progress and its many readers is not these four papers: it is the countless others published in the journal that cite and utilise her many brilliant insights. Indeed, as I prepared to write this tribute, I was struck by how much more Doreen had shaped my own thinking than I had realised. Reviewing her many publications and lectures, I was reminded of how very much she had taught me over a great many years. Aside from the above mentioned Power geometries book, my personal favourites are her essays 'The political place of locality studies' (Massey, 1991b) and 'Geographies of responsibility' (Massey, 2004).

¹The second edition came out in 1995 courtesy

In recognition of her prodigious talents and achievements she received a great many accolades. Though not one for pomp and circumstance (she decline an OBE), she was awarded the Victoria Medal by the Royal Geographical Society (1994), the Lauréat Prix International de Géographie Vautrin Lud (1998), a Fellowship of the British Academy (2002), the Anders Retzius Gold Medal by the Swedish Society for Anthropology and Geography (2003), the Centenary Medal by the Royal Scottish Geographical Society (also 2003) and several honorary degrees. This is a truly extraordinary achievement, one reflective of her wide and deep influence on Geography and social science more broadly. To quote from a famous beer advertising campaign, she reached the parts that most other academics cannot reach.

If Doreen Massey had never lived, critical social science – let alone international geography – would have been significantly poorer this last forty years. That she taught so many people so much of profound significance is cause for great celebration. That she is now gone is, equally, cause for enormous sadness. Even in retirement she remained intellectually and politically active. Shortly before her untimely death she was lecturing and writing with energy and purpose. Geography, a plethora of other disciplines, and the broader Left will never know what signal contributions she would have made had she been with us another 5, 10 or 15 years into the future. But we do, at least, have a treasure trove of brilliant writings and memories to mine as we try to steer a course through a turbulent world full of challenges and opportunities. Even though she is gone, Doreen Massey will remain one of our essential reference points long into the future.

*This appreciation is written on behalf of all the editors of Progress: Christian Berndt, Sarah Elwood, Pauline McGuirk, Chris Philo and Sue Roberts.

References

- Allen, J., Massey, D.B, Cochrane, A. (1998) Rethinking the Region (New York: Routledge).
- Amin, A., Massey, D. and Thrift, N.J. (2000) Cities for the Many not the Few, Policy Press (Bristol: Policy Press).
- Clark, N., Massey, D. & Sarre, P. (2008) Material Geographies: A World in the Making (London, Sage).
- Gregory, D. & Urry, J. (eds) Social Relations and Spatial Structures (London: Macmillan).
- Massey, D. and Meegan, R. (1982) The Anatomy of Job Loss: The How, Why, and Where of Employment Decline (Methuen: London).
- Massey, D. (1984) Spatial Divisions of Labour: Social Structures and the Geography of Production (Macmillan: London).
- Massey, D. and Allen, J. eds. (1984) Geography Matters (Cambridge University Press: Cambridge) (translated into Greek).
- Massey, D. and Meegan, R. eds. (1985) Politics and Method: Contrasting Studies in Industrial Geography (Methuen: London) (reissued in 2009 by Routledge).
- Massey, D. (1995) 'New directions in space', in Gregory, D. & Urry, J. (eds) Social Relations and Spatial Structures (London: Macmillan) pp. 9-19.
- Massey, D. (1991a) 'Flexible sexism', Environment & Planning D 9, 1: 31-57.
- Massey, D. (1991b) 'The political place of locality studies', Environment and Planning A 23, 2: 267-281.
- Massey, D. (1992) 'Politics and space-time', New Left Review 196: 65-84.

- Massey, D. (1993) 'Author's response', Progress in Human Geography 17, 1: 71-2.
- Massey, D. (1999a) Power-geometries and the Politics of Space-Time (University of Heidelberg, Heidelberg).
- Massey, D. (1999b) 'Space-time, 'science' and the relationship between physical geography and human geography', Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers 24, 3: 261-276.
- Massey, D. (2001) 'Geography on the agenda', Progress in Human Geography 25, 1: 5-17.
- Massey, D. (2002) 'Geography, policy and politics: A response to Dorling and Shaw', Progress in Human Geography 26,5: 645-646.
- Massey, D. (2004) 'Geographies of responsibility', Geografiska Annaler: Series B, Human Geography 86, 1: 5-18.
- Massey, D. (2007a) World City (Cambridge: Polity Press).
- Massey, D. (2007b) 'Author's response', Progress in Human Geography 31, 3: 403-405.

A list of Doreen Massey's publications (1970-2010)

Books and edited books

- Cordey-Hayes, M. and Massey, D. (1970): An Operational Urban Development Model of Cheshire. Centre for Environmental Studies, London.
- Massey, D. (1971): The Basic: Service Categorisation in Planning, Centre for Environmental Studies, London.
- Massey, D. (1974): Towards a Critique of Industrial Location Theory, Centre for Environmental Studies, London.
- Massey, D. and Batey, P.W.J. eds. (1975): Alternative Approaches to Analysis, Pion, London.
- Massey, D. and Catalano, A. (1978): Capital and Land: Landownership by Capital in Great Britain, E. Arnold, London.
- Massey, D. and Meegan, R. (1979): The Geography of Industrial Reorganisation: The Spatial Effects of the Restructuring of the Electrical Engineering Sector Under the Industrial Reorganisation Corporation, Pergamon Press, Oxford.
- Massey, D. and Meegan, R. (1982): The Anatomy of Job Loss: The How, Why, and Where of Employment Decline, Methuen, London.

- Massey, D. (1984): Spatial Divisions of Labour: Social Structures and the Geography of Production, Macmillan, London.
- Massey, D. and Allen, J. eds. (1984): Geography Matters: A Reader, Cambridge University Press, Cambridge. (also translated into Greek)
- Massey, D. and Meegan, R. eds. (1985): Politics and Method: Contrasting Studies in Industrial Geography, Methuen, London. (reissued in 2009)
- Massey, D. (1987): Nicaragua: Some urban and regional issues in a society in transition, Open University Press, Milton Keynes.
- Allen, J. and Massey, D. eds. (1988): The Economy in Question, Sage, London.
- Massey, D. and Allen, J. eds. (1988): Uneven Re-development: Cities and Regions in Transition: A Reader, Hodder and Stoughton, London.
- Ginwala, F., Mackintosh, M. and Massey, D. (1991): Gender and Economic Policy in a Democratic South Africa, Open University Press, Milton Keynes.
- Massey, D., Quintas, P. and Wield, D. (1992): High-tech Fantasies: Science Parks in Society, Science, and Space, Routledge, London.
- Massey, D. (1994): Space, Place and Gender, Polity Press, Cambridge. (also translated into Polish)
- Massey, D. and Allen, J. eds. (1995): Geographical Worlds, Oxford University Press, Oxford.
- Massey, D. and Jess, P.M. eds. (1995): A Place in the World? Places, Cultures and Globalization, Oxford University Press, Oxford. (also translated into Italian)
- Massey, D. (1995): Spatial Divisions of Labour: Social Structures and the Geography of Production, Macmillan, London (second edition; also translated into Japanese).
- Allen, J., Massey, D. and Cochrane, A. (1998): Rethinking the Region, Routledge, New York.
- Massey, D. (1999): Power-geometries and the Politics of Space-Time: Hettner-Lecture 1998, University of Heidelberg, Heidelberg.
- Massey, D., Allen, J. and Pile, S. eds. (1999): City Worlds, Routledge, London.
- Allen, J., Massey, D. and Pryke, M. eds. (1999): Unsettling Cities, Routledge, London.
- Massey, D., Allen, J. and Sarre, P. eds. (1999): Human Geography Today, Polity Press, Cambridge.

Amin, A., Massey, D. and Thrift, N.J. (2000): Cities for the Many not the Few, Policy Press, Bristol.

Amin, A., Massey, D., Thrift, N.J. (2003): Decentering the Nation: A Radical Approach to Regional Inequality, Catalyst, London.

Massey, D. (2005): For Space, Sage, London (also translated into Portuguese and Greek).

Clark, N., Massey, D. and Sarre, P. eds. (2006): A World in the Making, Open University Press, Milton Keynes.

Massey, D. (2007): World City, Polity Press, Cambridge (also translated into Spanish).

Clark, N., Massey, D. and Sarre, P. eds. (2008): Material Geographies: A World in the Making, Sage, London.

Massey, D., Maciel, H.P. and Haesbaert, R. (2008): Pelo espaço: uma nova política da espacialidade. Bertrand Brasil, Rio de Janeiro.

Journal articles

Massey, D. and Cordey-Hayes, M. (1971): Use of models in structure planning, Town Planning Review 42(1): 28-44.

Massey, D. (1973): Towards a critique of industrial location theory, Antipode 5(3): 33-39.

Massey, D. (1973): The basic: Service categorization in planning, Regional Studies 7(1): 1-15.

Massey, D. (1974): Social justice and the city: A review, Environment and Planning A 6(2): 229-235.

Massey, D. (1975): Behavioural research, Area 7(3): 201-203.

Massey, D., Minns, R., Morrison, W.I. and Whitbread, M. (1976): A strategy for urban and regional research, Regional Studies 10(4): 381-387.

Massey, D. (1977): The analysis of capitalist landownership: An investigation of the case of Great Britain, International Journal of Urban and Regional Research 1(3): 404-424.

Massey, D. (1978): Capital and locational change: The UK electrical engineering and electronics industries, Review of Radical Political Economics 10(3): 39-54.

Massey, D. and Meegan, R. (1978): Industrial restructuring versus cities, Urban Studies 15(3): 273-288.

- Massey, D. (1978): Regionalism: a survey of some current issues, Capital and Class 2(3): 106-125.
- Massey, D. and Meegan, R. (1979): Labour productivity and regional employment change, Area 11(2): 137-145.
- Massey, D. (1979): In what sense a regional problem? Regional Studies 13(2): 233-243.
- Massey, D. (1981): Regionalismo: alguns problemas atuais, Espaço e debates (4): 50-83.
- Massey, D. (1982): Enterprise zones: A political issue, International Journal of Urban and Regional Research 6(3): 429-434.
- Massey, D. (1983): The shape of things to come, Marxism Today 27(4): 18-27.
- Massey, D. (1983): Industrial restructuring as class restructuring: Production decentralization and local uniqueness, Regional Studies 17(2): 73-89.
- Massey, D. and Miles, N. (1984): Mapping out the unions, Marxism Today 28(5): 19-23.
- Massey, D. (1986): Nicaragua: Some reflections on socio-spatial issues in a society in transition, Antipode 18(3): 322-331.
- Massey, D. (1986): Inside a textbook, Journal of Geography 85(3): 116-119.
- Massey, D. (1987): Spatial labour markets in an international context, Tijdschrift voor economische en sociale geografie 78(5): 374-379.
- Massey, D. (1987): Thoughts from a train going north, Area 19(3): 269.
- Massey, D. (1987): Nicaragua: Transition to socialism in the USA's backyard, Geography 72(4): 352-356.
- Hall, P., Jackson, P., Massey, D., Robson, B., Thrift, N. and Wilson, A. (1987): Horizons and opportunities in research, Area 19(3): 266-272.
- Massey, D. (1987): Spatial labour markets in an international context, Tijdschrift voor Economische en Sociale Geografie, 78(5): 374-379.
- Massey, D. (1988): A new class of geography, Marxism Today 32(5): 12-17.
- Massey, D. (1989): Reflections on the debate – Thoughts on feminism, Marxism and theory, Environment and Planning A 21(5): 692-697.
- Massey, D. (1991): The political place of locality studies, Environment and Planning A 23(2): 267-281.
- Massey, D. (1991): A global sense of place, Marxism Today 35(6): 24-29.

Massey, D. (1991), Flexible sexism, Environment and Planning D: Society and Space 9(1): 31-57.

Massey, D. and Wield, D. (1992): Science parks: A concept in science, society, and 'space' (a realist tale), Environment and Planning D: Society and Space 10(4): 411-422.

Massey, D. and Wield, D. (1992): Evaluating science parks, Local Economy 7(1): 10-25.

Massey, D. (1992): Politics and space/time, New Left Review 196: 65-84.

Massey, D. (1992): Sexismo flexible, Sociológica 7(18): 157-200.

Quintas, P., Wield, D. and Massey, D. (1992): Academic-industry links and innovation: Questioning the science park model, Technovation 12(3): 161-175.

Massey, D. (1992): A place called home? New Formations 17: 3-15.

Massey, D. (1993): Questions of locality, Geography 78(2): 142-149.

Massey, D. (1994): The geography of trade unions: Some issues, Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers 19(1): 95-98.

Massey, D. (1995): Thinking radical democracy spatially, Environment and Planning D: Society and Space 13(3): 283-288.

Henry, N. and Massey, D. (1995): Competitive time-space in high technology, Geoforum 26(1): 49-64.

Henry, N., Massey, D. and Wield, D. (1995): Along the road: R & D, society and space, Research Policy 24(5): 707-726.

Massey, D. (1995): Making spaces, or geography is political too, Soundings: a journal of politics and culture no. 1: 193-208.

Massey, D. (1995): Masculinity, dualisms and high technology, Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers 20(4): 487-499.

Massey, D. (1995): Spatialising radical democracy, Society and Space 13: 283-288.

Massey, D. (1996): Some geographical thoughts on 'flesh and stone', City 1(1-2): 164-166.

Massey, D. (1996): Politicising space and place, The Scottish Geographical Magazine 112(2): 117-123.

Massey, D. (1996): In order to make a difference, The Scottish Geographical Magazine 112(3): 186-187.

- Massey, D. (1998): Space-time and the politics of location, Architectural Design 68: 34-38.
- Massey, D. (1998): "Identity": Some parallels between feminist debate and the identity of place, Berichte zur deutschen Landeskunde 72(1): 53-59.
- Massey, D. (1998): Espacio, lugar y género, Debate feminista 9: 39-46.
- Massey, D. (1999): Negotiating disciplinary boundaries, Current Sociology 47(4): 5-12.
- Massey, D. (1999): Philosophy and politics of spatiality: Some considerations, Geographische Zeitschrift 87(1): 1-12.
- Massey, D. (1999): Space-time, 'science' and the relationship between physical geography and human geography, Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers 24(3): 261-276.
- Massey, D. (1999): Humeur: Lieux, cultures et mondialisation, Géographie et cultures, no. 29: 97-102.
- Massey, D. (1999): Geography matters in a globalised world, Geography 84(3): 261-265.
- Massey, D. (2000): Understanding cities, City 4(1): 135-144.
- Massey, D. (2000): Editorial: Practising political relevance, Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers 25(2): 131-133.
- Massey, D. (2000): Angeleno Anomalies, New Left Review, 2nd series, no.1: 173-176.
- Massey, D. (2001): Opportunities for a world city: Reflections on the draft economic development and regeneration strategy for London, City 5(1): 101-105.
- Massey, D. (2001): Geography on the agenda, Progress in Human Geography 25(1): 5-17.
- Massey, D. (2001): Talking of space-time, Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers 26(2): 257-262.
- Massey, D. (2002): Globalisation: What does it mean for geography? Geography 87: 293-296.
- Massey, D. (2002): Geography, policy and politics: A response to Dorling and Shaw, Progress in Human Geography 26(5): 645-646.
- Massey, D. (2002): Editorial: Time to think, Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers 27(3): 259-261.

Massey, D. (2002): Don't let's counterpose place and space, Development 45(1): 24-25.

Amin, A., Massey, D. and Thrift, N. (2003): Regions, democracy and the geography of power, Soundings: a journal of politics and culture no. 25: 57-70.

Harrison, S., Massey, D., Richards, K., Magilligan, F.J., Thrift, N. and Bender, B. (2004): Thinking across the divide: Perspectives on the conversations between physical and human geography, Area 36(4): 435-442.

Massey, D. (2004): The political challenge of relational space: Introduction to the Vega Symposium, Geografiska Annaler, Series B, Human Geography 86(1): 3

Massey, D. (2004): Geographies of responsibility, Geografiska Annaler: Series B, Human Geography 86(1): 5-18.

Massey, D. (2004): Economie, culture et lieu: quelques réflexions sur les relations en jeu, Géographie et cultures 49: 59-70.

Massey, D. (2004): The responsibilities of place, Local Economy 19(2): 97-101.

Massey, D. (2004): Space-time, science and the relationship between physical geography and human geography, Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers 24(3): 261-276.

Massey, D. (2004): Lugar, indentidad y geografías de la responsabilidad en un mundo en proceso de globalización, Treballs de la Societat Catalana de Geografia 57: 77-84.

Massey, D. (2005): Negotiating nonhuman/human place, Antipode 37(2): 353-357.

Greenhough, B., Jazeel, T. and Massey, D. (2005): Introduction: Geographical encounters with the Indian Ocean tsunami, The Geographical Journal 171(4): 369-371.

Massey, D. (2005): Lugar, identidad y geografías de la responsabilidad en un mundo en proceso de globalización, Treballs de la Societat Catalana de Geografia 57: 77-84.

Harrison, S., Massey, D. and Richards, K. (2006): Complexity and emergence (another conversation), Area 38(4): 465-471.

Massey, D. (2006): Space, time and political responsibility in the midst of global inequality, Erdkunde 60(2): 89-95.

Massey, D. (2006): Landscape as a provocation: Reflections on moving mountains, Journal of Material Culture 11(1-2): 33-48.

Massey, D. (2006): London inside-out, Soundings: a journal of politics and culture no.32: 62-71.

Massey, D. (2007): Book review symposium: Author's response, Progress in Human Geography 31(3): 403-405.

Massey, D. (2007): The world we're in: An interview with Ken Livingstone, Soundings: a journal of politics and culture no. 36: 11-25.

Massey, D. (2008): When theory meets politics, Antipode 40(3): 492-497.

Harrison, S., Massey, D. and Richards, K. (2008): Conversations across the divide, Geoforum 39(2): 549-551.

Massey, D. (2009): Concepts of space and power in theory and in political practice, Documents d'anàlisi geogràfica 55: 15-26.

Massey, D. (2009): Filosofia e política da espacialidade: algumas considerações, GEOgraphia 6(12): 7-23.

Massey, D., Human Geography Research Group, Bond, S. and Featherstone, D. (2009): The possibilities of a politics of place beyond place? A conversation with Doreen Massey, Scottish Geographical Journal 125(3-4): 401-420.

Hall, S. and Massey, D. (2010): Interpreting the crisis, Soundings: a journal of politics and culture no. 44: 57-71.

Massey, D. (2010): The political struggle ahead, Soundings: a journal of politics and culture no. 45: 6-18.