FIRST BULLI BRICKWORKS:

The bricks for the construction of the Oddfellows' Hall and for building in Bulli and Woonona were made "on an elevation at the rear of the court house, south of and overlooking the proposed station at Bulli". Bulli's first brickworks were abandoned with the building of the railway which passed across their site and where the goods yard was constructed. The production of bricks then began at Woonona, where Pendlebury's works were opened.