PILOT PROGRAM TO BEGIN

IF ALL goes as planned, a pilot scheme to help disabled children and young adults could begin on May 8.

The pilot is for a program being launched by the Institute of Education and the University.

The program's director, Ms Lyn Gow, says questionnaires have been sent out to parents of handicapped children under 18 years of age throughout the Illawarra Region. She expects response to be strong.

"There will be three different programs, a leisure program for children under 18, a similar program for young people over 18 and a program dealing with individual children in the normal school environment," Ms Gow said.

Two university students are mapping out the under and over 18 programs, thanks to money provided by the Institute.

"I have had contact with a number of parents in the community who want help with their children," Ms Gow said.

"There will be five children initially in the individual program, and I am devising programs with students from the Institute for these children.

"The courses will preferably be taught in the schools, but the Institute students will go to the homes if need be."

Ms Gow says that bringing the scheme into the normal school environment also could expose other children with learning difficulties, and she hopes the individual program will expand.

The overall program to be held at the Institute will involve arts, crafts, human movement, music, physical education, games and the performing arts.

There will be a student co-ordinator for each stream, and an overall program co-ordinator.

"The program also will involve two research students from the University—one from education, the other from psychology," Ms Gow said.

"They will follow the program through, mapping out individual participant's progress." Ms Gow says that since the initial publicity, new developments are taking place daily, and one of the biggest problems, transport to and from the Institute, already has been overcome.

A number of community groups have offered to provide their special uses for the program.

"Our next move, once the program is ironed out, will be to get non-handicapped children under 18 involved as co-participants including siblings of the handicapped," Ms Gow said.

"It will be a good opportunity for handicapped children to mix with their own peers."

The pilot scheme, which will run for about four weeks, will be held on Saturdays, from about 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Ms Gow says it will be held in the Institute's barbeque area and gym facilities, with the opportunity for barbeque lunches every day of the scheme.

"Once we have the bugs out of the program, we will be expanding it," she said.

"We have the funds available for the rest of the year."

Students involved in the program will gain invaluable work experience, Ms Gow said.

Morals debate

THE Rev Fred Nile visited the campus last Friday and spoke against any repeal or changes to laws related to homosexual acts between consenting adults.

The Rev Nile, invited to address a lunchtime meeting of students by the University Union, is also a member of the NSW Upper House.

While there was some vocal opposition from banner bearing students, the debate appeared to break little new ground on the subject.
Malaysian prac

DURING this year's inter-semester break, a group of Institute of Education and University students will undertake prac teaching in primary schools in Penang, Malaysia.

The students will be in South-East Asia for almost six weeks, and while in Penang will live with Malaysian families.

The Institute initiated this program last year when Mr J. Scarlett and Dr G. Winley escorted a group of 22 students to Penang.

Staff, students and the Malaysian authorities agreed the venture was educationally and socially worthwhile.

Malaysia's Consul-General, Mr Ahmed Ithnan, recently visited the Institute to discuss this year's program, and from all reports, has given his support to the venture.

The Consul-General also discussed the possibility of boosting Malaysian student numbers on Wollongong campus.

Also discussed were:
- Possibility of Malaysian teachers undertaking the Institute's external studies course in English as a second language, and
- With the establishment of a Centre for Literacy at the Institute, it may be possible for overseas students to attend courses to improve their understanding of English before enrolling in University courses.

US exchange group

THE latest group of US exchange students has arrived on campus.

The students — 13 admitted under the New Jersey State College Exchange Program, and one under the International Student Exchange Program (ISEP) — have enrolled and seem to be fitting into campus life quite easily.

The 13-student group is from the New Jersey Colleges, a group of seven State-funded colleges in New Jersey, while the lone ISEP student, Phyllis Cohen, hails from New York.

The New Jersey students will study in Wollongong for at least this session, with the option of staying on for the rest of the year if they wish. Phyllis is here for the full year.

This is the fourth group of US students to study on campus and under the exchange arrangements between the US authorities and this university.

The campus fraternity extends a warm welcome to the newcomers, and hopes they have a pleasant stay in Australia.

JAN Whitehead is one Wollongong student sold on the idea of exchange student life.

In a recent letter to the University Administration she thanked the University for the opportunity to study in New Jersey under our exchange program.

Jan, who is attending Stockton State College in Pomona, New Jersey, says: "I would thoroughly recommend the life of an exchange student to everyone. It is a tremendous opportunity to experience life in another country and so come to a better understanding of the similarities and differences in lifestyle."

Another potential drawcard for those interested in the idea of becoming an exchange student in the US is that young Australians seem to be readily accepted wherever they go.

THE Student Madrigal Choir of the University of Muster, in West Germany, will visit Wollongong as part of its Australian tour this month.

The choir, which will perform at the University's Union Hall on March 21, also will present concerts in Sydney, Newcastle, Armidale, Melbourne, Adelaide and Perth before heading home early next month.

The choir also will conduct a choral workshop on Saturday afternoon, March 20, at the Wollongong Institute of Education's Music Centre. That will run from 2.00 - 4.30 p.m.

Campus music development officer, Mr David Vance, says the workshop is designed to interest all those who conduct or sing in choirs, and will cover rehearsal techniques, programming and style.

From all reports, Wollongong's German community is excited by the pending visit, the choir's second to Australia. Its first, in 1973, was praised highly by critics in Australia and New Zealand.

Choir members will stay out among the German community while in Wollongong, and there also is talk of a slap-up German-style celebration to mark the event.

The choir was formed in 1947 under the leadership of its present director, Professor Herma Kramm.

Since then it has toured extensively in Europe, England and the US with visits to Africa, Asia and Australia.

It has more than 20 long-playing records to its credit and frequently broadcasts on radio and television.

The choir specialises in unaccompanied singing in several languages, including English, and is particularly noted for its interpretation of the German masters Bach, Brahms, Schumann and Mendelssohn.

The visit has been organised by the Wollongong University Singers, and coincides with Heritage Week activities.

Tickets for the one and only concert are $5 for adults ($3 concessional rate for students and pensioners).
Prof. Dury
has his head
in the clouds

THE University's Geography Department is honoured in having one of the world's great academics visiting and working with local department members for the next few months.

Emeritus Professor George Dury, who was lured to Wollongong by what he considers to be some of the most exciting landform research work being conducted in the world today, has the distinction of being in the top 100 best sellers on the Pelican book list.

The book which earned him the title — and has sold about 500,000 copies — is The Face of the Earth. While it was not intended as a geography textbook, it has slowly become that through four editions.

As far as the Geography Department is concerned, and Dr. Bob Young in particular, Professor Dury is one of the most prolific researchers in a number of controversial fields.

Perhaps the most controversial is his work on climatic change.

When he delivers his public lecture, organised for early April, Professor Dury is bound to send a cat among the pigeons with his belief that there is no way climatic change can be predicted over the long term.

He believes there is no cyclical pattern for change, and rather than wave patterns developing, there are sudden variations of precipitation, snowfall, temperature and wind patterns.

What causes those changes is still the great mystery.

Australian farmers, forever wanting to know future rainfall patterns are unlikely to be relieved by Professor Dury's ideas.

However, they could draw some comfort from his belief that there is no way to predict whether Australia is becoming drier, wetter, hotter or colder.

Nor does he believe that industrial pollution or man's land use patterns are having much effect on climatic change — one way or the other.

Professor Dury, who lives in early retirement in East Anglia, England, spent 10 1/2 years at the University of Wisconsin, in the U.S. Before that he spent a number of years at Sydney University.

"I love Australia, and always look forward to getting out here," he said.

JUDGING by the activities the Friends of the University have lined up for Wollongong during Heritage Week, 1982, special thanks should be in order.

While Wollongong generally fares well in terms of the overall number of activities planned, the Friends have undertaken seven projects — by far the majority.

These activities include an exhibition of arts, artifacts and natural history, an Australian folk music concert, a public lecture by Emeritus Professor Manning Clark, a concert of Australian music, a public questions forum involving naturalist, Harry Butler, films and yet more concerts.

All Friends' activities will be staged on campus.

While Newcastle rates two activities, Wollongong rates a whole page of the official Heritage Week calendar.

Sydney, by comparison, has planned three pages of activities.

Mr. Giles Pickford, campus spokesman for the Friends, says the work of his group stands on its own merit.

While much of the Friends' work is not so publicly noticeable, people should sit up and take note. After all, the organisation is helping put this city on the map.

Appointments

THE Institute of Education has a new part-time lecturer in sculpture, David John Horswell.

David has studied with some of the finest sculptors in Australia including Robert Klipple, and has had several postgraduate showings at Sydney's Hoparth Galleries over the years.

He has also been runner-up in both 1977 and 1978 open exhibition's at the Sydney Square. One exhibition was in honour of Huzumi Memoto, a Japanese taxi driver murdered for his belief in humanity.

David is also working on a project with the museum of Applied Arts and Sciences in Sydney for Stage One of the museum project. He has presented drawings for a proposed water sculpture for the museum.

Mrs Adele Fraser-Fayne has accepted the position of part-time lecturer in the Associate Diploma in the Arts.

Well known for her achievements in dancing competitions, she has been four times Australian and South Pacific Exhibition Dancing Champion (jazz and adagio) and represented Australia in two world titles and two Asian Pacific Titles.

She has been involved in choreography for amateur and professional stage presentations.

Mrs Fraser-Fayne, who has studied dance in London and the U.S., holds a Diploma in Teaching (Primary) and Bachelor of Education (Pending), and is particularly interested in the promotion of dance in schools.

DAVID VANCE has been appointed campus musical development officer for the next three years. As such he will be responsible for the encouragement and development of musical activity on campus, as well as arranging appropriate music for ceremonial and other occasions. David holds an honours degree in English literature and in music as well as the L.MusA, in piano. He has also held teaching posts at Sydney University and both Wollongong and Sydney Conservatoria. David had been a part-time member of Wollongong University staff since 1975. His work, both in music and as a revue writer for The Sydney Morning Herald is well-known to many people in this city.

Chipman’s children

A controversial lecture which attracted national headlines for its scathing criticisms of many teachers in Australian schools will be published later this year by Oxford University Press.

The lecture by Professor Lauchlan Chipman, national President of the Australian Council for Educational Standards, has been retitled ‘Children of Cynicism’ and will appear in a collection of essays titled New Conservatism in Australia.

It is edited by fellow Australian Robert Manne, a political sociologist from La Trobe University.

Professor Chipman has since completed a study of the controversy which followed the reports of his original address.

The study, to be published under the title ‘Confessions of a Teacher Basher’, will appear in the national literary magazine Quadrant in May or June.

Professor Chipman says the article ‘pulls no punches’ and will leave a lot of red faces.

Human rights book

THE Chairman of the Australian Law Reform Commission, Mr. Justice Kirby, launched a new book last week on the teaching of human rights.

The book, which is published by the Australian National Commission for UNESCO, is edited by Professor Alice Tay of the University of Sydney, who is to be a guest speaker at one of this year’s University of Wollongong graduation ceremonies.

Among the contributors to the book, titled Teaching Human Rights, are Wollongong Chancellor, Mr. Justice R.M. Hope, Wollongong Philosophy Professor Lauchlan Chipman, and Professor H.J. McCloskey of La Trobe University, who is a former Visiting Professor in the Department of Philosophy in the University of Wollongong.

A former part-time member of the Wollongong Philosophy Department, Mr. Roger Wilkins, collaborated with Professor Tay in the preparation of the book, expected to sell for $8.95.

External courses

ALTHOUGH the Institute of Education has offered correspondence courses for more than a decade, few people outside the Institute are aware of them.

Yet as far as the Institute is concerned, external students constitute an important part of each year’s intake.

A variety of courses is being offered this year, ranging from conversion courses from diploma to degree status, to specialist courses such as teaching English as a second language or secondary mathematics education.

The presentation of material to external students over the years has grown more sophisticated. While much still depends on the written word, the use of audio-visual aids, tele-tutorials, and weekend and vacation schools is helping to overcome any communication problems.

It is hoped the bonds between the Institute and its external students will be strengthened by lecturer visits to outlying centres and the inclusion of external representatives in student councils.

External students are also encouraged to provide items of interest to Campus News.

external diploma courses are approved

THE Institute of Education’s postgraduate diploma course in education studies (secondary mathematics education) has been approved for four-year academic status.

The Director of Planning Services in the Institute’s Department of Education, Mr. Bunker, says this approval will be of particular interest to teachers.

They now have the opportunity to upgrade their qualifications to four-year salary and academic status, through external studies, in areas which appear to hold improving job prospects.

The Chairman of the Department of Education, Mr. Parry, points out to students that there is an anticipated demand in the following teaching fields: mathematics, science (especially physics, chemistry and agriculture), languages, industrial arts, music and home economics.

S.R.C.’s FOOD CO-OP

ALL students are reminded that the SRC’s food co-op is now open for business.

The goods offered by the co-op consist mainly of dried fruits, grains, legumes, nuts, honey and soap.

It’s a non-profit service, and prices are about 20-30 per cent lower than those found in even the cheapest shops in Wollongong.

The SRC says that ideally, the co-op should be run on a roster basis by a number of interested students. Those who do run it, of course, are open to further discounts.

The SRC says the co-op was fairly successful last year, and it hopes the venture will run even more smoothly this year.

Remember, though, the food co-op can only be a success with your support, and those interested in finding out more about it should contact the SRC.

The co-op will open on a weekly basis on either Tuesday or Wednesday, 12.30 - 2.00 p.m.

Hopefully, a full price list will be available for all students sometime within the next few weeks.

S.R.C.’s FOOD CO-OP

If you intend coming to the dinner and are unable to call at the Union for tickets, forms are available from the Secretary Manager, G.A. Williams.

Forms and cheques should be returned by March 12.

Be early - and don’t be disappointed.

Postgraduate

diploma courses are approved

THE Institute of Education’s postgraduate diploma course in education studies (secondary mathematics education) has been approved for four-year academic status.

THE University Union, in conjunction with the Friends of the University, is organising a dinner to be held during Heritage Week 1982, on Thursday, March 25.

The guest speaker will be controversial naturalist, Mr. Harry Butler. With Mr. Butler’s recent appointment by the Tasmanian State Government still in everyone’s minds, the dinner promises to be a special event. The Union says the dinner will be held in the Union Hall at 7.30 p.m. Tickets are $12 for members and guests, and are now available from the Union Office.

Forms and cheques should be returned by March 12.
The university's department of physics will be holding its inaugural series of public lectures for the first session in the campus Lecture Theatre, Building No. 14.

Musical Society news

The University of Wollongong Musical Society, affiliated with the union, and arranges concerts and musical events on and off the campus.

Society membership is open to all members of the university (staff and students).

This year the society plans to continue with an exciting and vigorous program of music that can be enjoyed by a wide range of tastes - jazz, classics etc. As in its previous seven years, it will continue with the policy of promoting Australian artists of outstanding talent, and on some occasions overseas artists.

The society wants a strong membership to support its objective of providing a wide variety of high quality musical enjoyment for members of the university.
