CANADA/AUSTRALIA LITERARY AWARD FOR 1981

The winner of the Canada/Australia Literary Award for 1981 is the Canadian fiction writer Leon Rooke.

The prize, which includes $3,000 dollars Canadian and a trip to Australia, is designed to make Australians and Canadians familiar with each other's writers. In alternate years an Australian writer receives the cash award and travels to Canada.

The inaugural award in 1976 went to Australian playwright John Romeril. Canadian writer Alice Munro was the winner in 1977. She was followed by Australian poet Thomas Shapcott (1978), Canadian poet Michael Ondaatje (1979), and Australian novelist Roger McDonald (1980). The prize is awarded for a writer's total production rather than for a single work and there are no restrictions on genre — novelists, playwrights and poets are eligible.

The current winner, Leon Rooke, is best known for his novel Fat Woman (Oberon, 1980) which was nominated for the Governor General's Award in fiction. Although Rooke had been writing short stories since the sixties, Fat Woman was his first novel. The work is the story of Ella Mae Hopkins, a woman not only large of body ('gluttony, thy name is Hopkins'), but also large of soul.
