AND SO WE ARE TEN—AND CELEBRATE!

Come what may
Time and the hour run through the roughest day
Macbeth

And so we—or that is to say The University of Wollongong—is ten years old. The occasion of the tenth anniversary was celebrated last Friday evening by the thing universities do best—with a graduation ceremony, in this case for those who had completed the requirements for the award of a degree at the end of this year’s First Session.

And from the first musical strains by the University Singers heralding the Procession and Opening to the brief closing address by the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Ken McKinnon, the affair moved to a warm close, with a dinner party afterwards in the Union.

The Vice-Chancellor, one was relieved to observe, looked none the worse for his kidnapping a few days earlier—at banana point!—by a group of masked students during their Commem Week rave.

The occasion of the tenth anniversary was given an added—indeed massive—sense of occasion by the award of an Honorary Degree of Doctor of Letters to Sir Roden Cutler, one of Australia’s most significant and popular figures. The awarding of the degree by the Chancellor, Mr Justice Hope, was greeted by prolonged and warm applause, and so indeed was Sir Roden’s Occasional Address which came later (and which is reported in full elsewhere in this issue).

Also awarded an honorary degree—a Doctor of Science—was the noted wild-life expert and conservationist, Mrs Thistle Stead.

Equally significant was the awarding of University Fellowships—the first offered by the University—to four of Wollongong's leading citizens, each of whom over the years had played a significant role in the development of the University.

The new Fellows are the Lord Mayor of Wollongong, Alderman Frank Arkell, Miss Ethel Hayton, journalist and extremely generous benefactor, Mr. Laurie Kelly, Speaker of the NSW Legislative Assembly and Deputy Chancellor of the University, and Merv Nixon, a director of the Technology Centre recently founded by the University, and secretary of the South Coast Labour Council.

The citations to these awards, presented by the Vice-Chancellor, Professor McKinnon, are also given in full elsewhere in these pages.

THE CEREMONIES

The graduation ceremonies began with an address from the Chancellor. It is hard to imagine, he said, that it was just ten years ago that our distinguished guest, Sir Roden Cutler, installed me as Chancellor of this University. In that time we have grown quite markedly and being only ten years old we are still experiencing growing pains with enrolments now topping the 6,000 mark compared with only 2,300 in 1976.

'As evidence of the expansion,' he went on, 'we now offer courses catering for Creative Arts, Nursing, Computing and Education as well as the Humanities, the Social Sciences, Science, Commerce, Mathematics and Engineering. Our Summer Session is becoming increasingly popular as is the introduction of a College for Seniors. Our interaction with industry will also become more evident with the development of the recently approved Technology Centre and the Centre for Technology and Social Change. I can also see the success of enterprises such as the now annual Town versus Gown cricket and rugby matches as helping to bind us in more and more with the community as will our new association with the Conservatorium.'

To graduands he offered special congratulations for the recognition they would receive that day.

'We hope that you have enjoyed your university experience and that you feel a sense of achievement as you obtain your awards. Today's ceremony is a public recognition of your years of work and endeavour. At this ceremony you will all become permanent members of this University. You will also become members of convocation, a body which has as one of its responsibilities, the election of some of the members of the University Council. You can also become actively involved in promoting the activities and development of the university by joining the Graduates' Group of The Friends of the University.

'Many people have given you support, encouragement and guidance during your courses and many of them are here today to witness your achievement. Your family, your friends and your teachers all deserve our thanks for what they have done for you.

'As well as offering our congratulations to today's graduands, we also extend our best wishes to them for their future careers.'

On behalf of the Council of the University the Chancellor gave special welcome to Sir Roden Cutler and Mrs. Thistle Stead. Another special welcome was extended to Ethel Hayton, Lawrence Kelly, Frank Arkell and Mervyn Nixon.

'These four people we honour, on this our tenth anniversary for their services to the community and the University.'
The Occasional Address was delivered by Sir Roden Cutler. What follows is a very lightly edited version of his speech.

The University of Wollongong has been remarkably successful in the ten years of its existence and now has a foundation upon which it can build its academic reputation and its community involvement.

Disraeli in a speech to the House of Commons in 1873 said: “A university should be a place of light, of liberty, and of learning”. Within that framework, each university develops particular strengths. The framework is wide enough to cover the Humanities, Creative Arts, Economics, Engineering, Mathematics and Scientific and Technological subjects.

This University, like the James Cook University at Townsville, merged in 1982 with the local Institute of Education and as a result now offers courses both at university and advanced education or college level from associate diplomas to degrees in disciplines which suit the needs and aims of its students. It is obvious that students have welcomed this and already Wollongong has created a reputation for being a place of creative and practical study.

Clive Williams of the University of Sydney did a study on this and said: “Compared with other universities, Wollongong ranks very high on the nature of early experience.... and ranks in the top third for satisfaction”. Williams’ research also showed that Wollongong had the lowest drop-out rate of any of the six New South Wales universities and that students gave the campus a high rating for the quality of education and the relationship with students and staff.

It takes some years for the academic basis of a university to be recognised by students and the public. It must be remembered that older-established universities have a competitive edge in attracting top H.S.C. students. The University of Wollongong can take satisfaction in the fact that it is attracting more students each year—indeed in the past two years, the numbers have grown from 4,300 to more than 6,000—and the cut-off H.S.C. marks for students to gain entrance here has risen. This indicates that in attracting well-qualified students under the conditions of competition for tertiary education places, Wollongong is increasingly successful.

The standard of education here is becoming recognised in the community.

Indeed, in certain established fields such as Mining, Engineering, Metallurgy and Physics, Wollongong has been important from its inception. It is very strong in Computing, and first-rate results are being achieved in that area. It is also eminent in the area of Robotics which involves the use of computer-controlled mechanical devices. These areas of learning and research are of particular value to the Wollongong area where mining and industry are major sources of production and employment.

The School of Creative Arts has been innovative and progressive and I cannot think of any other university which would be interested in composing a work for a Ned Kelly Opera. Music is strong as also is Sculpture. Another innovation of the University has been the development of Multi-Cultural Studies which is aligned with the Centre for Studies in Literacy. Again the community with its large migrant population would find such studies not only useful but ones to which they would feel they could contribute. A further innovation—and in my view a necessary one—in this area is the creation of an Aboriginal Educational Unit.

The Summer Session developed here enables students to take courses in the summer vacation to bridge the gap between H.S.C. and university subjects and to gain some knowledge of tertiary studies and what, if anything, would suit them before committing themselves to an associate diploma, diploma or degree program.

An aspect of university life which I always felt was lacking in my undergraduate days is the association of academia with the practical everyday working life of the community. This association should be a continuing and on-going relationship, enabling employers and trade unionists to understand the value of university-educated persons and to have the opportunity to suggest to the

Sir Roden Cutler
Doctor of Letters

In the course of the Graduation Ceremonies Professor Peter Rousch, Deputy Vice-Chancellor, presented Sir Roden Cutler for the Degree of Doctor of Letters (honoris causa).

Professor Rousch said:

'Born in 1916, Roden Cutler was educated at Sydney High School and subsequently The University of Sydney where he gained the degree of Bachelor of Economics.

'His early employment from 1935 to the early stages of World War II was with the Public Trust Office of New South Wales. Still in his early twenties, Roden Cutler joined the Australian Infantry Forces that fought in the historic desert campaigns of 1941. In mid-1941 he was cited for displaying exceptional courage in the field of battle. One month later, at Damour, he led an attack under heavy fire and subsequently lost his leg as a result of severe wounds. It was in November of that year that he was bestowed with the ultimate award for bravery — the Victoria Cross.

'Despite this singular honour it was to be, in the field of public service that Roden Cutler would distinguish himself. Very quickly he came to be acknowledged as a person of intellect and considerable administrative skills. Accordingly he became Australian High Commissioner to New Zealand shortly after the conclusion of World War II, and subsequently High Commissioner to Ceylon. Other distinguished appointments followed in rapid succession.

'It was in recognition of his achievements in these appointments that Roden Cutler received the Commander of the Order of the British Empire in 1957, to be followed over a period of two decades with the awards of a series of knighthoods — Knight of the Most Venerable Order of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem; Knight Commander of the Royal Victorian Order; Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George; and Knight of the Order of Australia.

'It was, therefore, as Sir Roden Cutler that he put the seal on a brilliant career when he was made Governor of the State of New South Wales in 1966, a role he administered with outstanding success over a 15 year period. As Governor, Sir Roden became the Foundation Visitor of The University. This position is a key one in universities, which have provision for that position. Our own Act of Incorporation describes the Visitor as having "full authority and jurisdiction to do all such things and entertain such causes as may pertain to or be exercised by visitors as often as he thinks fit". The role and authority of the Visitor have been canvassed in several legal cases: essentially, the view is that expressed in the case of Thomas v. University of London (1864) that "whatever relates to the internal arrangements and dealings with report to the Government and management of the house, of the Donus, is properly within the jurisdiction of the Visitor and the Court will not interfere in those matters..." Fortunately, during Sir Roden's term of office as Governor he did not have to exercise his authority as Visitor in regard to the internal management of this University!

'Since his retirement from the governorship in 1981 Sir Roden has been a director of several Australian companies, and is currently Chairman of Air New South Wales and of the State Bank of New South Wales.

'Chancellor, it is my privilege to present to you Sir Roden Cutler, an eminent Australian, whose contribution to his country and its people has been marked by great personal courage and sacrifice, and dedication to the highest ideals of service for admission to the degree of Doctor of Letters, honoris causa.'

THISTLE YOLETTE STEAD

The honorary degree of Doctor of Science was conferred upon Mrs Thistle Stead. In her citation Dr. Winifred Mitchell said:

Thistle Y. Stead, who celebrated her 83rd birthday recently, has devoted the whole of her long working life to the preservation of Australia's natural environment.

Born Thistle Harris, in July 1902, she was educated at Morpman Public School, Redlands and the University of Sydney. With Bachelor of Science and Master of Education degrees she became a lecturer in Biological Science at the Sydney Teachers' College.

Metal Foundry and Shipwrights Union to look at the effects on unemployment when new technology is introduced to the manufacturing industry. There has been a decline in the Australian manufacturing industry and the University is setting up an Industrial Automotive Centre closely associated with the Faculty of Engineering to research and, it is hoped, to reverse this decline.

The University of Wollongong has not stood still in the ten years since it was founded. It is now beginning to move into a further developmental phase from a stronger base. This phase involves new ideas and research, community involvement, consideration of the environment, and shows an awareness of areas of concern to most people. At the same time, the university has provided through its teaching of the humanities and its inovations in artistic fields, a standard of education and attitudes which conforms to Disraeli's description that a university should be a place of light, liberty and of learning.
Foreword
by the Vice-Chancellor

Recent studies by our Staff Office suggest that we have a need to issue regular information that is pertinent to all of the staff members of this University.

It has been my pleasure to give approval for this supplement to be commenced and edited by Staff Office.

As the University grows, it becomes difficult keeping staff informed on relevant matters. This supplement will assist in overcoming this problem by disseminating information on a regular basis, by promoting rapport between staff, and by helping staff to appreciate the wide diversity of work and backgrounds on campus. Matters may include, for instance, changes in awards, legislation and policies, answers to questions regarding conditions, interesting safety issues, short profiles on new staff members, staff training courses available, deadlines to be met, for example public holidays and study leave, and notes about staff members' achievements, etc. It is planned to publish the supplement every three to four weeks as necessary.

I hope staff contribute information and/or feedback that will be of assistance in improving our communications and relationships between members of staff.

Professor Ken McKinnon.

Superannuation

July 1, 1985 saw major changes to the State Superannuation Scheme.

Staff eligible to contribute for superannuation after that date will join the State Public Service Superannuation Fund. Entry to this fund is optional. Benefits are in the form of a lump sum payment and contributions are based on percentage of salary ranging from 3% to 9%. As staff members become eligible to join they will be provided by Staff Office with an explanatory booklet and an application form.

Those who were contributors or who were eligible to contribute as at 30th June 1985 will remain or become members of the State Superannuation Fund. Booklets explaining variations to the existing Scheme have already been forwarded by the State Superannuation Board to contributors.

Enquiries regarding superannuation should be directed to Ross Walker (extension 3934 - academic staff enquiries) or Gary Graham (extension 3935 - general staff enquiries).

Safety News

NEW PROBLEM AREAS

Two developments in recent years have combined to create a significant challenge to the University in the field of employee health.

The first is the rapid development of computer-based communication in the form of word processors and the proliferation of personal computers.

The second is the proclamation of the Occupational Health and Safety Act 1983 which places greater responsibility on the employer, on individual supervisors and on the employee for the provision of safe systems of work.

The University has installed a variety of word processing units and computer terminals throughout its various departments and operators now are exposed to different patterns of work. As most people are aware from the considerable media coverage, this new technology has introduced some new problems which must be solved quickly.

UNIVERSITY Responds

The University’s Safety Officer and Personnel Officer have devoted a great deal of time to the investigation of available furniture to ensure the best combination of operator and equipment. They have also provided expert advice to operators regarding the importance of personal techniques such as posture, work loading and exercise.

In all 170 staff have attended sessions conducted by a visiting Occupational Physiotherapist.

Fifty new chairs have been distributed to staff engaged for a significant part of their time in keyboard operations, and these chairs provide quick adjustment for height and back support and meet the best ergonomic requirements.

Attention is now focused on desks for computer terminals. Already a number of commercial versions have been installed and this has led to the design and construction of the University’s own version of desk to suit individual requirements. Although this may take a little longer to complete, the advantage is that the basic ergonomic requirements can be built in and the desk size and configuration designed to suit the demands of each user.

CONTINUING PROGRAMME

The Safety Officer will progress the supply of this equipment as quickly as the resources of the workshops and his time will permit. The supply of ergonomic chairs as a matter of urgency has placed the most useful and important part of the workstation equipment at the disposal of the users. This enables an operator to make a reasonable compromise between existing equipment and the keyboard until the desks are supplied.

From information gleaned from other universities, Wollongong has made significant steps in dealing with the installation of this technology and it is the aim of all concerned with this challenge to ensure that adequate equipment is provided in the minimum time to reduce any risk to staff.

Induction Programme Started

Recently, the first “Introduction to the University” morning was held to assist the transition of new general staff members to the University. These sessions will now be held on an ongoing basis, their frequency depending upon the numbers of new staff.

The general purpose for the “Introduction to the University” is to provide background information on the University and covers topics such as:

- History, role and structure of the University
- Personnel Policies
- Equal Employment Opportunity Policies
- The Administration
- Walking Tour of Campus

Those of you who are not a new starter and would like to attend the “Introduction to the University” may do so. First priority, however, will be given to new staff.

Further details: Wendy Raikes (extension 3798).

Travel Fellowship

The Australian Institute of Tertiary Educational Administrators (A.I.T.E.A.) sponsors an annual travel fellowship of up to $2,000 intended to assist members of the Institute to undertake a project in Australia or overseas with the intent of developing proposals for improving the management of tertiary institutions. AITEA membership is available to anyone engaged in the practice of tertiary educational administration.

Applications for the 1986 fellowship close very shortly. Interested persons should contact Wendy Raikes (extension 3798) in the first instance.

General Staff Vacancies Policy

Vacancies for general (i.e. Non Academic) staff positions are advertised on forms, called “Schedules of General Staff Vacancies”.

These forms are distributed to all Departments throughout the University. It is left up to each Department to determine how these notices should be brought to the attention of its staff. Some departments utilise notice boards, whilst others use a distribution system. All members of the general staff should ensure they have access to these notices. The notices are also posted on boards in the Administration Building and in the Hut.

Everyone who is employed by the University in any capacity (full-time, part-time, limited term, casual) during the currency of the advertisement (i.e. between the date of advertising and the closing date) is eligible to apply for positions advertised in these Schedules.

Only if there are no appointable internal applicants will positions then be advertised externally. The exception applies in cases where the salary of the position in question is at or above the level of Senior Administrative Officer grade 1. In such cases the University Council has directed that the position should be advertised internally and externally at the same time.

Further details: Gary Graham (extension 3935).

New Staff Profiles

Marie COOPER - Graduate Assistant, University Secretary’s Division.

Marie Cooper has taken over the position held by JoAnne Pomfrett as Administrative Assistant to the University Secretary.

Marie is not new to the University, she enrolled as a student in 1978 and has a B.A. and Dip.Ed. She has worked as a Laboratory Assistant in the Psychology Department and as a Graduate Assistant in various sections of Administration, as well as working in part-time positions within the University.

Marie enjoys travel, the theatre, films and bushwalking and has been known - at least once - to go canoeing and caving.

Michael FARNAN - Word Processing Development Officer, Computer Centre.

Before entering the fields of Office Automation and Business Computers, Michael enjoyed a Military career in Aviation Electronics and Communications which took him to most parts of the civilised world (and a few uncivilised).

His interests include music and running.

Michael recently started as Word Processing Development Officer which is a position designed to co-ordinate and maintain efficient and effective word processing facilities across campus.
Development Leave For General Staff

Applications for Development Leave for general staff close on 15th October each year, for the year following.

The scheme for Development Leave for general staff was approved by the University Council late in 1983. The leave may be taken either in Australia or overseas, and is intended to enable a staff member to complete a programme of study or visits of mutual benefit to both the staff member and the University. Generally, the period of leave will not normally exceed three months and some financial assistance is available.

This year, a member of the Library staff was granted Development Leave to undertake a programme of visits to various Libraries to study developments in cataloguing music, manuscripts, rare books and incunabula.

Further details and the conditions of Development Leave are available from Wendy Raikes (extension 3798).

Staff Training and Development Activities

The recent Equal Employment Opportunity Strategy Development Workshops highlighted the concern of staff members regarding the lack of information on staff training and development activities. The Staff Training and Development Unit will bring to your attention, through this newsletter, a number of external courses and programmes that are available. You are asked to note, however, that unless otherwise indicated, such courses and programmes will not be funded by central University funds until such time as the University Staff Training Vote has sufficient funds to sponsor participation in these activities.

has established close and continuing formal links with the University. The City Council through its direct support of the University's submissions to the Federal Government for resources has strengthened our claims.

In recognising Frank Arkell's contributions as Lord Mayor, we also acknowledge the contributions of the aldermen and officers of the City Council.

ETHEL HOSKINS HAYTON

Miss Hayton's association with the University extends as far back as her membership on the Mayoral Appeal Committee formed in 1959 for the purpose of raising funds towards the establishment of a University for the people of the Illawarra region.

That association with the University has continued. Miss Hayton has not only given freely much of her time both personally, and in her professional capacity, but also has given many generous gifts to the University including this lectern, which is now used for all official functions and graduation ceremonies. Her presence over the years at the annual graduation ceremonies is a manifestation of her warm support of the University. She was also a foundation member of The Friends of the University and continues to be active in that organisation.

Miss Hayton is a person of remarkable enterprise and energy. Since her arrival in Wollongong over 50 years ago she has taken an active role within the community. She enriched her career as a journalist with close involvement in numerous community organisations. Her membership of the Wollongong Arts Council extended over a period of 30 years, 13 of which were as president. For over 25 years she served as an executive member of the Good Neighbour Council in Wollongong. She was a founding member of the Committee for the Wollongong Conservatorium of Music - which today is part of the University.

MERVYN FRANCIS XAVIER NIXON

Merv Nixon came to this district to play professional rugby league with Thirroul in 1954; in the same year he found employment as a waterside worker at Port Kembla. His association with the trade union movement in this district began with his membership of the Waterside Workers Federation at Port Kembla. Later on, Merv Nixon accepted the task of building the South Coast Miscellaneous Workers Union.

At this stage, Merv Nixon threw himself wholeheartedly behind the movement to establish a local university. By example, he inspired a willingness and confidence in other unionists to do likewise. The trade union movement was in the vanguard of that campaign in 1959 and over the next three years it collected a considerable sum towards that cause. Merv Nixon's personal involvement was inspired by a strong belief in the view that equal access for all people to education was fundamental to building a more egalitarian society. His personal association with the University has continued; today, he serves as a Director of the Illawarra Technology Centre which was recently established by the University.

Merv Nixon has served the community in a variety of ways. His involvement with the South Coast Labour Council goes back to 1956. He is the elected Secretary of that Council and has held that position since 1959.

In recognising the contribution of Merv Nixon, we also recognise the continuing and strong commitment of the trade unions to the development of education in this district and their sharing of the University's aim of providing higher education for the people of this region.

'UNI CAN BE PROUD OF ACHIEVEMENTS'

Wollongong University can feel extremely proud of its 10 years in this city.

The university, its staff, academics, administrators, assistants, sponsors and friends can reflect on a decade of achievement and merit. It has made a considerable contribution to the growth and character of Illawarra.

It has nurtured and educated thousands of young people, thereby playing another significant role in the enrichment of the professions and the arts, industry and the many noble callings answered by students.

So today, to mark the university's 10th anniversary, four fellowships are to be awarded in recognition of services to the community.

The recipients of those fellowships will be Lord Mayor of Wollongong, Ald Frank Arkell, Speaker of the NSW Legislative Assembly, Mr Laurie Kelly, South Coast Labor Council secretary Mr Merv Nixon and university benefactor Miss Ethel Hayton, MBE.

These fellowships will be awarded today at a special graduation ceremony. We applaud the university for awarding these fellowships to the four recipients, all of them deserving. They have contributed enormously to the welfare and growth of their city.

Each in their own right has worked ceaselessly and selflessly for the advancement of the city, for the protection and good of the people and the future prosperity of the region.

The decision to award the fellowships can only serve to forge stronger and friendlier links between the university and the people. Sometime there can be tendencies for academic establishments to remain aloof, to work away from, and not with, the population it purports to serve.

Such has never been the case in Wollongong. It never will be because administrators at the university are renowned for their friendships with the people. They encourage understanding.

That is why they have decided to award the fellowships, a non-academic bestowal on four people who can be well proud today of their achievements.

Our personal congratulations to Ald Arkell, Mr Kelly, Miss Hayton and Mr Nixon.

Congratulations also to the university itself for the job it has done for the city and its people, for helping Illawarra to achieve national academic distinction and recognition and for its own superb, professional standards of education. Wollongong University is held in very high esteem.

And that reputation has been earned through 10 years of diligence, application and dedication which have given our house of academic learning a stamp of national class.
General Notices

1985 CTEC PARTICIPATION AND EQUITY PROJECT

The University of Wollongong has received $50,000 under the Participation and Equity Programme to conduct a pilot project which will contribute to the longer-term improvement of access to higher education by these disadvantaged groups in the Illawarra: Aborigines, women, disabled persons, ethnic groups, young people form low-income families and people living in outer metropolitan and rural areas.

The University will be conducting this investigation in conjunction with Wollongong TAFE and a working group of the Illawarra Regional Co-ordinating Committee on Education. The first task will be to conduct research into the special needs of the various groups before determining the most beneficial preparation programme.

As part of the research, the Planning and Development Section would be interested in hearing from any student or member of staff on issues such as:

- What are the problems faced by disadvantaged groups?
- What should be done about them?
- What sort of assistance would be most useful?

Please contact Karen Wilcox, Planning and Development, extension 3918 or call into the 1st floor, Administration Building.

SPEAKERS FOR GRADUATION — 1986

As it is necessary to approach people well in advance inviting them to speak at our graduation ceremonies, members of staff are asked to submit names and addresses of suitable speakers for consideration as soon as possible.

As we expect to have six ceremonies early in May, 1986, names and addresses should be sent to Trevor Brew, Senior Assistant Secretary, Academic and Student Services (ext 3906) so that early appointments may be made.
