UNIVERSITY DAY

'Education and the Australian–Papua New Guinea Relationships'–Michael Somare

University Day – Monday of last week and the University’s 27th birthday – might perhaps go down on the record for something else. It seemed to be one of the wettest days ever. The morning rain, of tropical intensity, caused the cancellation of the Fun Run – the punishing dash by athletes up Mt Keira.

The lachrymose tantrum thrown by the weather, however, did nothing to mar the evening occasion, during which historic pictures were displayed in the Long Gallery, the Ethel Hayton prizes were awarded, presentations were made to two members of staff who had completed 25 years service with the University, and the guest of honour, the Rt Hon Michael T. Somare CH MP, Minister for Foreign Affairs for Papua New Guinea, gave a thought-provoking address entitled 'Education and the Australian–Papua New Guinea Relationship'.

Mr Somare, himself a teacher before entering politics (and a friend and colleague of the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Ken McKinnon, who was then Director of Education in Papua New Guinea), took as his themes the processes which have changed the character of relations between PNG and Australia – first in the transition of his country to independence, and in the development of relations since that time.

'These historical links', Mr Somare said, 'are now being strengthened through the presence of a growing number of Papua New Guinean students on the Wollongong campus – including some from the Prime Minister’s as well as my own department. private-sector investors and employees. Whatever their actual occupations, many Australians have been engaged in trying to transfer values, practices or institutions.

'Before independence, Australians often cited the need to educate Papua New Guineans, in the broadest sense, in order to justify Australian rule.

'Sometimes, the argument inspired young Australians to go to, and then to stay in, Papua New Guinea.

'At other times, it seemed to be little more than an excuse.

'After World War II, the need was used to prise

Allan Sefton

Conservationist, steelworker, Allan Sefton was to have taken part in last week's Graduation ceremonies. He was to have received from the University an Honorary PhD in recognition of his contribution to the Illawarra region.

He died on Tuesday May 2, after a brief battle with malignant melanoma. He was 68. Mr Sefton is survived by his wife, four sons and a daughter.

The citation to his degree (awarded posthumously) read, in part:

'You have made a distinctive contribution to the development of the Illawarra region through your involvement in the steel industry and through your unrelenting attempt to understand and record the variety of the local environment'.

Mr Sefton worked for 46 years at Port Kembla steelworks – in the electrical engineering design sectors. He was awarded a British Empire Medal, the Order of Australia and the Australian National History medal - all in recognition of his love of nature and the environment.

He served the Illawarra National History Society as its president for seven years and was a member from the 1940s.

University Team gives first Technical Course in Wuhan Training Centre

A team from the University of Wollongong was recently commissioned by AIDAB to give the inaugural technical course at the Australia-China Iron and Steel Industry Training Centre in Wuhan, Hubei Province, People's Republic of China—a $15 million project.

The course topic, chosen for its wide applicability and generality in the industry, was Granular Materials—Properties and Applications. It covered activities from the mine to the blast furnace.

Team members were Professor Nick Standish, Department of Materials Engineering (course leader), Dr Peter Standish, Department of Civil and Mining Engineering (computer applications), and Aibing Yu, PhD Student, Department of Materials Engineering (course assistant).

The course was attended by 26 people from the various sections of the industry, e.g., mining, mineral processing, sintering, refractories, coke-making, ironmaking and others representing ten different steelworks around the country.

Use of the 'Forum'

It has been suggested that the 'Forum' immediately west of the Administration Building may not be being used as much as it might. One of the reasons may be the uncertainty of availability or of a contact person with regard to availability.

To help in developing a more interesting and usable facility it has been agreed that the School of Creative Arts, a principal user, be given priority use of the Forum and also responsibility for booking control.

The contact person will be Michael Young of the School of Creative Arts. Michael also has responsibility for bookings for the Music Centre (his extension is 3898).

Creative Arts Student Wins Wool Award

A third-year Creative Arts student at The University of Wollongong has won the 1989 New England Wool Expo's 'Wearable Wool Award'.

Pina Di Mambro, from Lake Heights, Wollongong, collected the award in Armidale at a function on April 12. Her work, a hand-felted coat with machine stitching and matching hat, won the $400 prize in the category 'From the Rainforest to the Reef' and the $1,000 prize for the overall winner.

Women's Health Clinic

A Women's Health Clinic has been established on campus, providing preventative health care for all female students and staff.

The clinic is run by the Women's Health Nurse Practitioner, Michelle Webb, employed by the Illawarra Area Health Service and the services provided include:

- Pap smears
- Breast examinations
- Information about all types of contraception, including diaphragm fitting
- Pregnancy testing and counselling
- Counselling on a range of issues including menopause, menstrual problems, sexually transmissible diseases, infertility, pre-menstrual tension and sexual difficulties.

The clinic is located in the Counselling Service, 1st floor, University Arcade, and operates every Thursday. All services are free and confidential.

Appointments are preferred and can be made by phoning 27 0445. Drop-in visits are also welcome.

Invitation to attend open meeting of University Conservatorium Board of Management

An invitation is extended to parents, staff, students and interested members of the public to attend the 21st meeting of the University Conservatorium interim Board of Management. The meeting will be conducted in the Gleniffer Brae Auditorium beginning at 5 pm on Tuesday May 30.

The Gleniffer String Quartet will open the meeting with a brief musical interlude. Afterwards there will be opportunity to meet the Board membership and to discuss matters relevant to the Conservatorium.

Light refreshments will be served after the meeting. For catering purposes, confirmation of attendance would be appreciated: please contact secretary, Mrs A. Smith, ext 3533 or phone 28 1122.
resources from a reluctant Australian Treasury, or to press for administrative reforms.

'It was also used to argue for delay.

'During the 1960s, in particular, the shortage of skilled Papua New Guinean personnel was one of the reasons given by the Australian administration for holding back political and constitutional change.

'So was the uneven distribution of educational achievement and opportunity within my country.

'But education also played a crucial role in stimulating those of us who argued and organised politically for self-government and

'In the process, the nature of the educational relationship between the two countries underwent quite fundamental alteration.'

And on the role of aid, Mr Somare said: 'Australian aid has, of course, made a vital contribution to the development of education in Papua New Guinea. Most of that aid has, historically, taken the form of a grant for general budgetary support. The particular Australian contribution to educational development in Papua New Guinea cannot, therefore, be readily singled out. But it has been nonetheless welcome and appreciated – and it has been no less effective.

'The increasing proportion of Australian aid which is tied to specific projects means that certain elements of the Australian contribution to education in Papua New Guinea can be more easily identified than before.

'It also means that the Australian government and taxpayers can be more certain about what the Papua New Guinea government is planning and doing.

'But the change in the previous aid arrangements has also reduced the sense of autonomy and flexibility with which government in Papua New Guinea can use Australian funds.

'It has added to our administrative overheads. It has made the aid component of the relationship between our two countries somewhat more complex to manage....'

Exchanges Under the Joint Declaration

On the subject of scholarships Mr Somare said: 'Following negotiation of the Joint Declaration as well as changes in the aid relationship between the governments of our two countries, agreement was reached that some 90 places would be provided in 1989 for Papua New Guinean students to study at tertiary institutions in Australia.

'Twenty-five of the most promising senior high school students have been awarded scholarships to complete their secondary education at schools in Australia. Their number will increase substantially in future years.

'Both developments are in accord with the Papua New Guinea Government's commitment to a capacity building. Both are compatible with the Australian Government's policy of marketing Australian education abroad. But care will need to be taken that what is helpful in the short-term does not become counter-productive in the medium- or long-terms. The programs in which Papua New Guineans are encouraged to enrol must be relevant to our needs. Some, like the University of Wollongong's Masters program in international relations, may have to be specially designed or adapted. All must be of an appropriately high and rigorous standard.

'We need to guard against the possibility that assistance may develop into dependence. Appreciative as we may be of Australian assistance, and familiar as we have become with Australian practices, our students should also be encouraged to look farther afield for knowledge and ideas....'

This is necessarily a very shorthand account of Mr Somare's address. The complete text is however available on request from Gillian Curtis, Media Liaison Officer, tel. (042) 27 0826.
Conference Centre and Hotel

A market feasibility study for a Conference Centre and Hotel to be built by the University was completed by Peat Marwick Hungerfords in October 1988.

That preliminary sketch plan proposal has been prepared to demonstrate the potential of the Campus East site and to allow detailed assessment of the concept.

The current project costs are estimated at $30 million. This includes fit-out costs, professional fees and design contingencies.

The building is designed to provide an image and character which are consistent with the 'forward thinking' and 'business and technology' objectives of the entire Campus East development. Functional areas within the building provide extensive flexibility, are efficiently serviced and take advantage of the site's coastal location.

The design of the building can be modified to meet the functional and financial requirements of any future operator of the facility.

The proposed complex is designed as a specialist conference centre offering superior meeting facilities, with all modern services and an environment that enables those attending to relax in pleasant surroundings outside meeting hours.

It is aimed at those sectors of the market which require functional and effective conference space in a pleasant environment, but which do have limited budgets and do not use conferences primarily as incentives or rewards.

The hotel accommodation is generally of 3.5 star standard, which provides all necessary comforts without opulence and is consistent with the needs and budgets of this sector.

'Collegiate-style' accommodation will be available for budget-conscious components of the potential market. The requirement for executive suites or other types of accommodation can be incorporated during subsequent planning phases.

'Outstanding book of the year'
Melanie Beresford, lecturer in South-east Asian History, has won an award from the North American Choice magazine for her book Vietnam: Politics, Economics and Society, published last year by Frances Pinter, London. Choice, which caters to librarians, reviews thousands of books each year and probably altogether receives as many as 25,000 titles. It selected Ms Beresford's book as an 'outstanding book of the year', one of only 200 to receive such a distinction.

The book is one of a series published by Pinter on 'Marxist Regimes' around the world. It is intended as an introductory text for undergraduates and covers the history of the communist party and the Vietnamese revolution, the social structure and political system, economic problems and policies since 1954, foreign policy and social policies in Vietnam today. Ms Beresford's second book, National Unification and Economic Development in Vietnam, will be published by Macmillan later this year.

The grant will be used to purchase literature written by Canadian writers. The Library already contains a small collection of Canadian prose, drama and poetry in both English and French. Some of this material was donated by the Canadian Government in 1988.

A course which compares Australian and Canadian fiction has been offered for some years by Dorothy Jones of the Department of English. This course is an adjunct to the activities of the New Literatures Research Centre.

Established in 1988, the Centre promotes the study of post-colonial literatures.

Telephone blocks
I am aware that problems are being experienced by some members of staff in obtaining outside telephone lines. These problems are generally encountered during certain peak periods. These periods have been identified as Monday to Friday, 11 am to midday.

It is planned to upgrade the switchboard to alleviate these problems in conjunction with the construction of the Commerce Building due for completion in 1990.

Meanwhile, staff are urged to spread their telephone calls as much as possible to avoid the peak periods.

R.E. Robertson
Senior Admin Officer, Business Services
Pro Vice-Chancellor
four-year-term appointment

With the impending retirement of the Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Services and Development), Professor Rousch, the Council has approved the establishment of a new position to be known as Pro Vice-Chancellor (Academic). Applications are invited for the appointment to the position from senior academic staff within the University. The position may be held for a full- or part-time basis as negotiated; although the duties are basically full-time and onerous, candidates may negotiate a fractional commitment to teaching and/or research in their discipline in view of the term nature of the appointment. The term is for a contract period of four (4) years without expectations beyond that period. While the appointment is potentially renewable, this is a separate decision.

The Pro Vice-Chancellor (Academic), who will form part of the University’s executive management team, will provide general support on academic and research matters to the Vice-Chancellor and the Deputy Vice-Chancellor, with specific responsibility for the activities set out in the attached statement of duties. These duties may be varied from time to time in conjunction with those of the Deputy Vice-Chancellor and the Pro Vice-Chancellor may be assigned particular projects by the Vice-Chancellor from time to time.

The post is not limited to those of Dean or Professorial rank, but does require of candidates clear evidence of leadership and academic management skills. Leadership in this context implies sharing in determination of the goals of the University and ability to persuade members of the community to overcome doubts and fears in achieving these goals. The appointee will need to have, in addition to academic planning and communication skills, the ability to take and maintain difficult decisions in ways which maintain the confidence of the academic community. Personal qualities of intelligence, energy and judgement and decisiveness are, of course, primary requirements, but optimism, self confidence, articulate are also expected of the successful candidate.

The selection will be made by a representative Selection Committee empowered to fill the post either by application or invitation. Applications should be concise and directed to the requirements of the post. The position will carry an annual full-time salary of $69,489 and the appointee will be provided with a University vehicle.

Applications close on May 21. Enquiries may be directed to the Vice-Chancellor on telephone number 27 0932 (ext 3932).

Statement of Duties for Position of Pro Vice-Chancellor (Academic)

1. Provide general support for the Vice-Chancellor and Deputy Vice-Chancellor on academic matters, with specific responsibility for:
   - academic staff appointments and leave;
   - courses and subject developments.

2. Responsible for the co-ordination of the following academic-related Units:
   - Aboriginal Education Unit;
   - Student Learning Assistance Program;
   - Wollongong Conservatorium of Music.

3. Sit on and/or chair University committees and represent the University on external bodies as appropriate.

4. Represent the University and promote regular co-ordination with TAFE and Schools in the Illawarra (IRCCE).

5. General overseeing of matters such as:
   - Space allocation
   - Timetabling
   - Community/public relations.

6. Special projects, as required.

Economist joins Faculty of Education

A new face on campus is that of Dr Ken Gannicott, who has joined the School of Policy and Technology Studies in the Faculty of Education. Dr Gannicott for the past ten years has been lecturing in economics at the Defence Force Academy in Canberra. He has a Masters degree in Economics from the University of Sussex and a doctorate from the University of New South Wales. All Dr Gannicott’s training and experience have been in the field of economics. He is now involved in the economics of education planning.

Distinguished scholar as guest speaker

The Accountancy Department was privileged to receive Emeritus Professor R.J. Chambers from Sydney University in the Department on April 19. Professor Chambers, who is not only an internationally-eminent scholar, but also an entertaining lecturer, spoke to the third-year students, post-graduate students and staff.

Wollongong well represented

At the annual congress of the European Accounting Association held in Stuttgart in April, three of the 450 participants were from Australia and two of these were from the Department of Accountancy, Wollongong. Mary Greenwell, who made the trip especially for the conference, presented a paper entitled The Social Construction of the Meaning of a True and Fair View, and Warwick Funnell, who was in Europe on study leave, presented a paper entitled Pathological Responses to Accounting Controls: the British Commissariat in the Crimea 1854–1856.
Press Council prize for honours thesis

The Australian Press Council has established a prize for the best honours thesis or similar work by a student enrolled in an Australian university or college of advanced education on a topic relating to aspects of freedom of speech and of the press. Examples of appropriate topics include, but are by no means restricted to, the legal restraints on news reporting, contempt of court in relation to the press and other media and the constitutional protection of freedom of speech.

The recipient is to be chosen on the recommendation of a panel of judges and the prize will be awarded at a reception by the council. It is anticipated that the prize will be awarded annually but, as is customary in these matters, the council reserves the right not to award a prize.

The amount of the prize is at present $1,000.

Students who are undertaking theses or similar research work in these areas should submit a copy of such work to The Secretary, The Australian Press Council, 149 Castlereagh Street, Sydney 000 by 30 November 1989.

The Council would seek to encourage publication of the winning submission.

Entries to be received no later than Friday August 25.

Medicare cover for employed overseas academics

A statement by Mr Noel Blewett, the Federal Minister for Community Services and Health, announced a reversal of the policy on Medicare in relation to academics temporarily resident in Australia.

Dr Blewett said the main change would be to extend Medicare benefits to people who come to Australia with employment.

He said this would entitle an estimated 36,000 taxpaying temporary residents and their dependants to Medicare cover this year.

Dr Blewett said that the Health Insurance Act had been amended to restrict Medicare eligibility to legally permanent residents in Australia. This was in line with similar amendments to other Commonwealth social welfare legislation.

'One of the effects of this change was to exclude from Medicare people temporarily in Australia. Previously, all visitors who were entitled to remain in Australia for more than six months were eligible for Medicare,' he said.

Dr Blewett said that he had reviewed the position of certain people who come to Australia for the specific purpose of engaging in paid employment. He went on, 'These people have come to Australia with employment, are using their professional skills to contribute to our country, and are paying income tax and the Medicare levy. I have therefore decided to use my discretionary power under the Health Insurance Act to extend Medicare eligibility to such people in appropriate circumstances.'

With effect from 1 February 1989, people who come to Australia under a contract of employment or some other formal arrangement which entails the visitor being present in Australia specifically for employment purposes will be covered by Medicare for the duration of the stay. Their accompanying spouses and dependants will also be covered.'

Dr Blewett said that groups covered by this arrangement would include participants in the Skills Transfer Scheme managed by the Department of Immigration, Local Government and Ethnic Affairs, visiting academics, and other education personnel such as teachers taking up temporary salaried appointments.

He said the Skills Transfer Scheme covered overseas personnel temporarily engaged in business and commercial activities in Australia.

Other visitors such as holiday-makers and those visiting Australia on a working holiday would not be eligible for Medicare.

'These people are strongly urged to take out comprehensive health insurance cover before departing for Australia, unless they come from a country with which Australia has a reciprocal health care agreement,' he said.

ACER's publishing directions

ACER (The Australian Council for Educational Research Limited) publishes a wide range of books, kits and tests. Its books include titles for teachers at all levels of education, for psychologists, for counsellors, for parents, for administrators, for students of education, for researchers.

Its pre-eminence in the field of scholarly educational publishing is well known. However, its growing list has also seen a move into other important areas — parent education very much among them. Becoming Better Parents (Balson), Lewis's recently published The Parenting Puzzle, and Living in a Stepfamily (Webber — also just released) are but three good examples.

ACER is also Australia's biggest and oldest publisher of tests: classroom tests, ability tests, study skills inventories, personality and behaviour measures, language batteries, tests for neuropsychological assessment and more.

It is ACER's intention to keep building on its book, kit, and test lists — whether titles are published in print, disc, tape, video or any other form. To do this it needs to work with good Australian authors in its fields of interest.

If any reader of Campus News has an idea for assessment for publication, he or she is asked to send a synopsis, contents and sample chapter to Ian Fraser, ACER's Publishing Manager, at PO Box 210, Hawthorn, Victoria, 3122.
Staff Roundup

Information Services Librarian
Craig Grimison has been appointed to the position of Information Services Librarian. Craig took up his appointment in early April. Craig comes from the University of New England where he was Lending Services Librarian.

Craig is well known in the Library community, particularly for his work on distance education (external studies). He has been on the organizing committees for several conferences and is the convenor of the committee responsible for a national conference on reader education to be held later this year. He has written several journal articles and is regularly invited to present conference papers.

Craig brings valuable skills to Wollongong and his participation in the library community will increase the Library's reputation. He is particularly interested in developing innovative services for Library users and would be happy to talk to members of the University about their information needs.

Craig's office is located near the Information Desk. His extension is 3550.

The University of Wollongong Review of Departmental Administrative Structure

As previously announced in Campus News, Judith Clarke has been engaged to carry out a Review of Departmental Administrative Structure and will be on campus during the week May 22–26. A workshop presented by Finance to help unravel the University's financial system. RSVP May 26.

Return blue nomination forms to Personnel. Inquiries to Shirley Jorgensen, ext 3946.

Concerts, Exhibitions and Entertainment

Mother Courage – tour de force by Fay Montgomery

Brecht wrote Mother Courage in 1936-38 as a warning to his countrymen of the consequences of the path Hitler was taking. He wrote it in an exile that continued from Scandinavia to America and lasted until after the war. When he produced the play in 1949, he believed its message was still relevant - that war brings not only suffering but also the inability to learn from it. No doubt he would still believe so today.

In the key role of Mother Courage herself, Theatre South’s Associate Director, Faye Montgomery, confronts the greatest challenge of her career. And in this role she excels herself. Her performance is a tour de force, of sheer acting ability, stamina (she is on stage throughout), experience and pure talent.

Other members of the cast include Andrew James, Charles Hambling, Lisa Scott-Murphy, Jeff Kevin, Michael Coe and Frank Gallagher. The production is designed by John Senczuk, lighting design by Ian McGrath and directed by Des Davis.

Mother Courage is a co-production with the School of Creative Arts of the University of Wollongong. Staff of the school are involved as well as third-year acting students in minor roles and other students on the production team.

This is a play not to be missed; it will run to May 20.
Don't miss this opportunity to see it. Bookings from Theatre South, tel. 29 6044.

The Art of Lunch

All performances are free and open to the public and are held weekly on Thursdays (during session lunchtimes from 12.35 to 1.25) in the Music Centre, Building 24, on the western side of the campus.
