University – industry R&D for export product development

A $400,000 research and development contract to design an integrated circuit for speech detection has been signed between Alcatel STC and the University of Wollongong’s Centre for Information Technology Research (CITR). The circuits will be used in payphones for export markets.

Alcatel STC Technical Director Bruce Jones said the chip will be included in the control circuitry of payphones to provide automatic timed services.

"Countries with less developed communications infrastructures do not have this signalling sophistication at present," he said.

"Timed calls, such as STD, must now be handled from the exchange."

The project will involve three members of the University’s Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering, as well as engineers from Alcatel STC and the Japanese electronics company Anritsu.

The University’s research team is Andrew Perkis, Bernt Ribbum and Dr Joe Chicharo.

Both Perkis and Ribbum are graduates of Norway’s prestigious E-Lab, where they undertook post-graduate studies in speech technology.

The contract was signed in Sydney by University of Wollongong Vice-Chancellor, Professor Ken McKinnon, and Alcatel STC’s Bruce Jones, after a recent CITR board meeting chaired by Chairman of the Australian Broadcasting Corporation, Bob Somervaille.

Director of CITR, Dr Ian Reinecke, said the contract was an excellent match between Alcatel’s requirements and the University’s developing expertise in speech technology.

"Alcatel STC is clearly an important company for any research centre specialising in telecommunications," he said.

"It has enormous world-wide research resources and, in Australia, has been selected as Telecom’s second switch contractor. We look forward to the successful completion of this contract and to a continuing working relationship."

Jones heralded the contract as a “tangible demonstration of Government’s desire for industry/university research co-operation”.

"An additional and important benefit of this particular project is that it will result in a product that we expect will be welcomed by telecommunications authorities in developing counties in many parts of the world,” he said.

IN 1988 the University of Wollongong presented inaugu­ral awards to staff members with 25 years’ service.

These awards will be presented again in 1991 in recogni­tion of the contributions made by the recipients both in the present and the past Professor Nicholas Standish and Mr Peter Costigan will receive the award this year, taking the total recipients to 23.

Professor Standish began with the University in December 1965 in the Department of Metallurgy and was promoted to Professor in April 1990.

Award for 25 years’ service

He attained a PhD in 1965 from the University of Otago and his special areas of interest are in blast furnace produc­tion and research, and microwave pyrometallurgy.

THE Commercial Attaché from the French Embassy in Australia, Monsieur Thierry Laloux, presented a lecture on the French economy to students from the Department of Modern Languages on March 28. M. Laloux (pictured above) also met Associate Professor Robert Castle (Department of Economics) and Mark Hall (Administrative Data Processing Unit). This was the first of four guest lectures in the Department of Modern Languages given by representatives of the French Embassy.

The remaining lectures are listed in the Seminars section on page six of Campus News. For further details, contact Dr Susan Yates, Department of Modern Languages, ext. 3636.
THE Reverend Raymond Heselhurst will give the sermon at the Annual University Service on Sunday May 12 at St John's, Keiraville, at 7pm.

Staff, students and members of the community are invited to attend.

Rev. Heselhurst is well known around campus. He has been contributing to the development of the University and the quality of life on campus since 1982 when he was appointed Chaplain to the University and Senior Assistant Minister of St Michael’s, Wollongong. He was appointed Rector of St John’s, Keiraville, in 1986.

Since coming to Wollongong he has been involved in working with students and staff at several levels including in the residences, in a counselling and teaching capacity, and in formal teaching programs run by the chaplaincy and other Christian groups on campus.

He is a member of the Friends of the University and served on the Community Involvement Committee, the Ethel Hayton Fellow Committee and in various programs run by the Friends.

He has lectured in the area of religious studies in the history of Christian thought and in basic introductions to Islam.

He is also a member of the Human Experimentation Ethics Committee of the University and the Student Services Advisory committee. Two years ago he was admitted to the convocation of the University by resolution of the University Council.

Rev. Heselhurst completed studies at the Wollongong Teachers’ College in 1970 where, he says, he distinguished himself by being the only student to fail a sixth grade spelling test.

In spite of this he continued with his studies and gained a Bachelor of Divinity (Hons) from the University of London, a Licentiate in Theology (Hons) from the Australian College of Theology and Diploma of Arts in Theology (Hons) from Moore College. He is awaiting the results of a thesis for a Master of Theology Degree in the area of Hermeneutics.

As reported in Campus News (April 23) he was awarded a Fellowship of the University at the April Council meeting which will be conferred next week.

Federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, Mr Robert Tickner MHR, visited the University on April 12. He is pictured with Mr Colin Markham MP Shadow Minister for Aboriginal Affairs at a book launch held that day (see page five). After the ceremony Mr Tickner visited the Illawarra Technology Centre for discussions with the general managers and with Barbara Lepani, (Program Director TASC), Trevor Maher (Director, Aboriginal Business Technology and Education Consultancy Centre) and Associate Professor Ross Harris (Faculty of Health and Behavioural Sciences).

University Day • Monday May 6. Address by the Honourable Barry Jones. 6pm. Music Auditorium
Reviews planned for three departments

THE Vice-Chancellor, Professor Ken McKinnon, after consultation with the Dean of the Faculty of Science, Associate Professor Peter Bolton, has initiated a joint review of the Departments of Geography and Geology, in June or July.

This is in line with the University's review procedures for academic units and is a consequence of the retirement of Professor Allan Cook from the Department of Geology in 1990.

The normal review terms of reference have been expanded to examine the benefits and difficulties resulting from a merger of the two departments.

Full details of the terms of reference for reviews and of the additional terms of reference for this review are available from Manager, Academic Services, Peter Wood, ext. 3943 or Microsoft mail.

Submissions are invited from any member of the University community. Submissions should reach Mr Wood no later than May 24.

Professor McKinnon has also initiated a "short" review of the Department of Materials Engineering in June or July.

This follows the resignation of Professor Bill Plumbridge, effective from the middle of this year. The review will cover curriculum and research activities of the Department.

Full details of the terms of reference for the review are available from Lynn Woodley, Academic Services (ext. 3360 or Microsoft mail). Again submissions are invited from any member of the University community. Submissions should reach Ms Woodley no later than May 24.

New jobs in steelmaking regions

WHAT practical initiatives can be taken to create new, safe and fulfilling jobs for workers in traditional steelmaking regions?

Several lessons can be learned by Wollongong from the initiatives taken by the Social Democratic government in the Rhine-Ruhr region of Germany.

Faced with many similar problems to Wollongong, the region has taken several steps to address this key question.

Head of the Rhine-Ruhr Institute of Work and Technology, Professor Franz Lehner, will show what can be done in collaboration with local institutions comparable to the University of Wollongong.

Professor Lehner will give a public lecture on May 1 at 2.30pm in the Kemira Room, in the Union Building.

Professor Lehner’s visit to Wollongong University is part of a growing collaboration between the University and West Germany in this area.

This has involved the Coordinator of the University’s Science and Technology Analysis Research Programme, Dr Richard Badham, working for a year and a half in Germany and the participation of the University Programme in the organisation of a proposed multimillion dollar federal German-Australian collaborative project to promote smarter forms of working in Australia.

Professor Lehner will be accompanied by Professor Naschold, a prominent advisory board member of Germany's Federal Work and Technology Programme.

Both will be available for questions at the talk.

Damping properties of concrete

THE Department of Civil and Mining Engineering has been making a study of damping since 1985.

Damping qualities of a material determine the response of a structure when subjected to a dynamic load such as the vibrations set up by a motor located nearby. The first Bachelor of Engineering thesis was completed on this topic in 1985, and three post graduate students undertook further studies in this area in 1987 and 1990.

Dr Richard Kohoutek, supervisor of theses, took special study leave to go to the Northwestern University in Chicago where he looked at the damping properties of concrete at their Centre for Science and Technology of Advanced Cement Based Materials.

A testing technique has been developed based on theoretical derivations formulated by Dr Kohoutek while at Northwestern University.

The results of the experimental and theoretical findings were reported at the American Society of Testing and Materials International Symposium in Baltimore, USA in March this year.

Orientation program takes a high profile

A FORMAL orientation program has been conducted by the University for three years and is now part of the academic calendar.

It is extremely important to first year students. This year an improved handbook and increased publicity generated increased attendances at most of the events.

The Union Hall was packed for the Vice-Chancellor’s welcoming ceremonies, and the parents’ welcome in the evening was well attended with parents travelling from Sydney and country areas.

Parents expressed their appreciation of the fact that they had been included in orientation activities.

Activities included faculty introductions, orientation visits to the Library and Microcomputer Laboratories, special programs for mature-age, international and Aboriginal students, basic survival skills lectures, a market day and visits to the Science Centre at Campus East.

The co-ordinator, Barbara Kane-Maguire, said that the opportunity Orientation Week gave for verbal communication between staff and students, especially in the informal gatherings arranged by some of the faculties, was one of the most important features of Orientation Week.

She urged even greater participation from staff next year.
Historic Aboriginal book launch

THE Aboriginal Education Unit at the University of Wollongong and local Michael Organ have launched a book entitled Illawarra and South Coast Aborigines 1770 - 1850.

The Chancellor of the University, The Honourable Dr. R.M. Hope, and eminent South Coast Aboriginal elder, Mrs Barbara Timbery, officiated at the launch.

The book, compiled by Michael Organ, is the first published by the Aboriginal Education Unit.

It is the first comprehensive work to explore the mostly unknown history of the Illawarra and South Coast Aboriginal clans and concentrates on events recorded during this time of change through many historical documents and references.

Although numerous sources give some insight into the area of Aboriginal studies, these sources are fragmented and dispersed throughout various publications.

This book attempts to bring together all published sources referring to the local people before 1850. It also includes a comprehensive bibliography covering the period 1770-1990.

As such it should become a valuable primary source for people studying the Aboriginal history of NSW, particularly the South Coast and Illawarra regions.

Publication of the book has also been made possible with assistance from the Illawarra Historical Society and through consultation with local Aboriginal people, from whom approval was sought to publish certain sensitive details that still bring pain to those who have descended from Aborigines referred to in the documents.

The Federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs and Member for Hughes, Mr Robert Tickner, and the Shadow Minister for Aboriginal Affairs in NSW and Member for Keira, Mr Colin Markham, attended the ceremony.

Early orders for the book have exceeded expectations and it is believed that a further print run will be required. Copies may be obtained by contacting the Aboriginal Education Unit, tel. (042) 213 776.

Mrs Barbara Timbery, Aboriginal Elder of the South Coast of NSW, discussing the book with the author Mr Michael Organ.

THE NSW Parliament passed several new laws and amendments related to anti-discrimination in its final sitting for 1990.

These are:

- An amendment to the Anti-Discrimination Act to make retirement on the ground of age unlawful;
- The Criminals Records Act 1990 under which certain 'spent' convictions need not be disclosed to any person and are no longer part of a person's criminal history after 10 years free of conviction; and
- Local Government (Street Drinking) Amendment which allows local governments to prohibit the consumption of alcohol in certain public areas.

Compulsory retirement is also against the law in most parts of the NSW public sector.

Under the compulsory retirement amendment to the Anti-Discrimination Act a person can no longer be retired, threatened with retirement; or treated in a way that results in a person retiring on the ground of age.

Workers can still choose to retire from work at 60, 65 or at any other age.

The amendment will apply to most NSW public sector employees from January 1, 1991. Private sector employees will be covered from January 1, 1993.

If you want more information on these amendments or the quilt workshop, call the Equal Opportunity Unit, ext. 3030 or 3917.
