Summer Session sizzles hotter than ever

THE University has recorded a 50 per cent increase in applications from students wishing to undertake credit subjects during the 1991/92 Summer Session.

Fifteen hundred students are expected to attend lectures during December and January taking subjects from the Faculties of Arts, Commerce, Law, Informatics, Engineering, and Health and Behavioural Sciences.

According to Pro-Vice-Chancellor of the University, Professor Lauchlan Chipman, this may be a result of the economic climate.

"Summer Session enables students to fast-track their degrees," he said.

"It is becoming increasingly difficult for students to find part-time work over summer when many traditionally set that time aside from their studies to earn some money.

"So they are opting instead to complete their degrees more quickly and look for permanent employment."

This is the University's 10th Summer Session since it was first offered in 1982. The University pioneered the idea in Australia of offering concentrated courses for credit during the traditional long summer break.

Most of Australia's public sector universities still do not teach all the year around.

Summer Session also gives students the opportunity to repeat subjects if necessary rather than repeating a full session, or undertake extra subjects that may enhance their career opportunities.

This enables a higher proportion of students to graduate in minimum time.

A growing feature of Summer Session is the enrolment of students from other universities who had negotiated with their own university to have a Wollongong Summer Session subject counted towards their degree.

Nominations called for VC's award

NOMINATIONS are called for the Vice-Chancellor's Awards for Excellence in Teaching.

This award scheme has been set up to encourage and reward outstandingly high quality performance and teaching by academic staff of the University.

Up to four awards will be available annually, each valued at $2000. Recipients will also receive suitably inscribed certificates.

Your input is essential. Nominations of worthy staff members can be made by staff members or students.

Former students of the University may also participate in the scheme by nominating academic staff members who have taught them.

Each nomination requires the support of three eligible members of the University community.

Each person can make only one nomination per year and self-nominations will not be accepted.

Nominations should be made on official forms available from Personnel Services and faculty offices.

Nominations must reach the relevant faculty dean by November 29.

The dean will then lodge a formal submission of no more than two nominees from the faculty.

Nominees, relevant department heads and deans will all provide information for the dean's submission.

The submissions will be considered by a committee consisting of the Dean of Students (chair), the Deputy Vice-Chancellor, the Head of the Centre for Staff Development.

THE inaugural meeting of Deans of multidisciplinary faculties of Health Sciences was held in Canberra on October 31–November 1.

The group was convened by the Dean of Health and Behavioural Sciences at the University of Wollongong, Professor Christine Ewan.

Deans or their representatives from the Universities of Melbourne, Newcastle, Queensland, Sydney, Western Sydney and Wollongong, Griffith, La Trobe and Charles Sturt Universities, Curtin University of Technology, Queensland University of Technology, the University of South Australia, and the University College of Central Queensland attended.

The health professions represented by the deans include public health and its branches, physiotherapy, nutrition and dietetics, nursing, optometry, psychology, human movement science, occupational therapy, radiation specialties, health administration, dental therapy and speech therapy.

Educational programs for some of these health professions were in the former CAE sector and for others in the pre-1987 universities. Amalgamations have resulted in the formation of new faculties with multidisciplinary responsibilities and new alliances between the professional groups.

The Council of Deans is the first group to represent the educational and research interests of this broad-based health professions group.

A priority issue before the group is the establishment of an understanding within institutions and the higher education sector of the specific needs created by clinical science and clinical research.

These needs have been recognised and resourced in medical and dental education for many years but have not been acknowledged sufficiently in the other health professions.

The Council of Deans is proposing a multidisciplinary national review of practice and priorities for development in clinical sciences in the health professions.

TREVOR Williams, Department of Management, has been recognised by the Royal Australian Institute of Public Administration for his paper, Reforming Public Sector Work.

Trevor was awarded second place in a national competition for the Sir George Murray Award in Australian Public Administration.

The paper addresses issues that will become the focus of management concern in both the public and private sectors. It will be published in the Australian Journal of Public Administration.

THE invisible college is flourishing on AARNET and there are discussion groups related to most disciplines.

Participation gives access to scholars throughout the world and provides opportunities to access the latest developments before they appear in print.

The Library has obtained a copy of the complete Directory of Scholarly Electronic Conferences which is available for consultation at the Information Desk, or on request, relevant subject sections can be transferred to a department via e-mail. Listings in the directory give a brief outline of the group and address details.

For further information contact Pam Epe, ext. 4176.

UNIVERSITY personnel are advised that the cashier's office will be open from 9.30 am to 4.30 pm on all normal working days with the exception of Tuesday December 24.

The office will close at noon on December 24.

All creditors' cheques must be collected before noon.

Uncollected casual salary cheques for the period ending December 20 will be posted on Monday December 23.

THE Children's Christmas Party will be held on Saturday November 30 from 11 am on the field west of the Recreation and Sports Centre.

There will be plenty of entertainment, rides and surprises. The cost per child is $8. The usual Christmas Hamper Raffle will be drawn on the day, but the organising committee needs donations to fill the hamper.

The Australian Consortium for Social and Political Research Incorporated, which promotes the use of machine-readable social science data, annually runs a summer program in social research methods.

The next program will be held at the University of NSW from February 2-14.

Further information and application details are available from: The Executive Officer, ACSPRI, Social Science Data Archives, Australian National University, GPO Box 4, Canberra ACT 2601, or tel. (06) 249 4400 or 2200.

Emergency phones on campus

EIGHT phones have been installed in strategic positions on campus.

The locations were chosen by a combined Administration and Students Representative Council team.

The locations of the phones are marked on new campus maps available from the Gate Houses, Cashier’s Office and the SRC.

The mode of operation of the phones is as follows:

• Lift Handset and listen for message giving the available alternatives which are:
  - For security – press 1
  - For 000 emergency service – press 2
  - For Wollongong Radio Taxi – press 3

Please familiarise yourself with the location of these phones and spread the message among your friends.

Help wanted: Overseas students as migrants

HOW many of our overseas students return to Australia as immigrants after graduation?

What experiences do overseas students have while they are here that encourage or discourage them from making Australia their home?

What expectations do students have about their future careers and the country they wish to settle in?

These are questions that a research team from the Universities of New South Wales and Western Australia have been asked to investigate by the Bureau of Immigration Research.

Dr Bryan Burke from the University’s International Student Centre of the University of New South Wales will join Associate Professor Drew Nesdale, Professor Laksiri Jayasuriya and Dr David Sang from the University of Western Australia to investigate the impact of the overseas student program on immigration.

Dr Burke says that with the projected shortage of academic staff in the near future, together with the Government’s emphasis on Australia becoming a “clever country” and the potential for all university graduates to contribute to our national development, it is important to understand the actual and possible role overseas students might play in this process.

“In my own case,” he said, “I am particularly interested in learning about the good and bad experiences students have during their time here, and how they have coped.

“The way in which they settled in initially as students and then later as immigrants is another area of great interest to me.

“Hopefully, the information we collect will help us
Local, international students encouraged to mix

THE results of a recent study conducted by Dr Tsilia Romm, Paul Patterson and Constance Hill in the Department of Management have shown that international students at the University of Wollongong express disappointment over their inability to befriend local Australian students.

Responding to these concerns and to the recent worldwide trend to internationalise management programs, the Department of Management is planning to introduce some curricular innovations that will enable both local and international students to interact more intensely and benefit from the highly cosmopolitan environment characterising the University of Wollongong.

From next year one of the largest subjects offered by the Department of Management, Organisational Behaviour, with an annual enrollment of 1000 students, will have a strong cross-cultural focus.

Co-ordinator of the subject in the first semester, Dr Romm, is planning to highlight the cultural theme throughout all aspects of the subject.

References to cultural implications will be discussed in lectures. Students will be encouraged to work in mixed (international and local) groups and to submit essays based on interviews with members of other cultures.

Assessment of all aspects of the subject will emphasise students' ability to apply theoretical concepts to diverse cultures.

Most important, tutorials will be used as an opportunity to observe group processes in cross-cultural contexts.

Various group dynamics techniques will be utilised to develop sensitivity and openness on the part of both local and overseas students to differences and similarities between them.

These activities, it is hoped, will lead not just to a higher quality "internationalised" management education, but also to much more meaningful one-to-one relationships between individual local and overseas students.

These modifications to the existing curriculum are intended as an experiment. If successful, the same concept may be applied to other subjects in the Department of Management.

Dr Romm is well qualified to co-ordinate the subject. She has run cross-cultural research in Canada, Israel, Japan and Germany. She has published articles in international journals in the area of organisational behaviour and change, immigration, culture, educational policy, higher education and power.

further develop our support services to help people in both settling-in stages."

In addition to surveying currently enrolled students the research team is eager to contact overseas student graduates who have returned as immigrants.

Dr Burke says one of the main problems facing the research team is the difficulty in tracing these "returnees" through University and Alumni records.

He urges anyone who was an overseas student and who has subsequently migrated here to contact him by telephoning (02) 697 5333 or writing to the International Student Centre, The University of New South Wales, PO Box 1, Kensington NSW 2033.

Any alumnus who knows a "returnee" could also be of great assistance by drawing this project to their attention.

The University of Wollongong Library has been honoured by the National Library of Australia at a recent ceremony at the State Library of New South Wales.

Library Systems Manager, Janette Burke, accepted a certificate from the Director-General of the National Library Warren Horton, at a reception attended by more than 100 representatives of the state’s major libraries last week.

The reception celebrated the 10th birthday of the Australian Bibliographic Network (ABN), a co-operative network administered by the National Library and which has more than 1100 Australian libraries as members.

The University of Wollongong Library joined ABN during the network’s first year.

Mr Horton thanked the University Library for its 10 years of contribution to ABN and to co-operation among Australian libraries.

“The support ABN received in its first year from libraries such as the University of Wollongong was crucial,” he said.

“It came at a time when joining ABN was as much a matter of faith as it was of business sense.”

Services provided by ABN include shared cataloguing and location information for interlibrary loans. Cataloguing a book costs money; some estimates put it as high as $60 per book.

Through ABN’s shared cataloguing service, once one library has catalogued a book, other libraries can find the catalogue record online and copy it, for a cost of around 25 cents.

ABN also allows librarians to find anyone of the eight million titles listed on the database from the author’s name, the title, or even just a few words of the title, and tell you which libraries in Australia have it.

They may, of course, then obtain it for you on interlibrary loan.

The network covers all its own costs; members pay for the data they use, and receive financial incentives for the data they contribute.

Lunch aerobics off

ALL lunchtime aerobics and circuit classes will be cancelled between Monday November 4 and Sunday November 24 due to exams.

Evening and weekend classes will continue and will be held upstairs in the multipurpose area.
