2005

Visual codes of secrecy: photography of death and projective identification

Julia St George
University of Wollongong

Recommended Citation
Visual Codes of Secrecy: Photography of Death and Projective Identification

A thesis submitted in fulfilment of the requirements for the award of the degree

Doctor of Philosophy

from

University of Wollongong

by

Julia St George BCA Hons

Creative Arts 2005
I, Julia St George, declare that this thesis, submitted in fulfilment of the requirement for the award of Doctor of Philosophy, in the Department of Creative Arts, University of Wollongong, is wholly my own work unless otherwise referenced or acknowledged. The document has not been submitted for qualifications at any other academic institution.

Julia St George
-- August 2005
Volume One
Table of Contents

Volume One

Abstract 11

Introduction 13
Establishment of perimeters 17

Overview of Sources 20

Definitions 28
Secrecy 28
Projection 32
The difference between projection and projective identification 34
Projective identification 35
Taboo as distinct from secrecy 37

Part One – Visual Coding of Secrecy as a Communication Strategy 39

1:1 Secrecy as communication 41
1:1:1 Secrecy is a meta-communication strategy 43
1:1:2 Art broadcasts the fact of secrecy 44
1:1:3 Concealment and Revelation 47
1:1:4 Routes of reference are communication conduits 50

1:2 Secrecy status of death in contemporary western society 53
1:2:1 Secrecy and death connections 54
1:2:2 Historically founded influences of secrecy around death 59
1:2:3 The contemporary status of the taboo 62
1:2:4 The split response to death in contemporary western culture 65
1:2:5 Significant contemporary exhibitions on death 66
1:3 Secrecy and Photography  70
   1:3:1 The potent connection of photography and truthfulness  72
   1:3:2 Photography as the medium most suited to secrecy  81

1:4 Isolation of secrecy dynamic specifically to projection and projective identification  86

Part Two – The Aestheticization of Death  95

2:1 Aestheticization and symbolic representations of death  95

2:2 Historical modes of depicting death and their contribution to the contemporary visual vocabulary of death  105
   2:2:1 The danse macabre or ‘dance of death’  106
   2:2:2 Vanitas or memento mori  107
   2:2:3 Historic images of trauma  108

2:3 Influence of religious iconography on images of death  113

2:4 The argument which links death and projective identification  121

Part Three – Photographs of the Dead  129

3:1 Photographic genres  129
   3:1:1 Memorial photographs or memento mori  133
   3:1:2 War photographs  135
   3:1:3 Forensic photographs  139
   3:1:4 Documentary photographs  142

3:2 Art photographs of the dead  146

3:3 Photographs without Barthes punctum  157
Part Four – Projective Identification 161

4:1 Salgado and projective identification 161
4:1:1 Phase one – the displacement of feelings 162
4:1:2 Phase two – the introjection of disowned feelings from society into the artistic sensibility 165
4:1:3 Phase three – the processing of introjection, then fed back to society 166

4:2 Salgado, Migrations and Projective Identification 170
4:2:1 Observations of Migrations as a single discrete text 171
4:2:2 Salgado’s photographic and aesthetic conventions 181

4:3 Witkin and projective identification 193
4:3:1 Witkin’s ‘high’ art references 195
4:3:2 Witkin on the grotesque 198
4:3:3 Witkin’s religious imagery 200
4:3:4 Tableaux vivants and masks 203
4:3:5 Witkin portrays various taboo themes 208
4:3:6 Witkin’s particular use of the photographic medium 209
4:3:7 Witkin’s use of binaries and projective identification 210

Part Five – Case Studies: Salgado, Witkin and Photographs of the Dead 213

5:1 Salgado’s images of death 213

5:2 Witkin’s images of death 224
5:2:1 Fragmentation of the body 231
5:2:2 Images of the corpse 235

Conclusion 243

Epilogue 251

Works Cited 257
Volume Two

List of Plates

Plates 1 – 101

Plate Details
Abstract

My thesis examines the nexus between secrecy, death, photography and the psychoanalytic dynamic of projective identification, which is an unconscious psychoanalytic interaction which translates and potentially transforms rejected or denied experiences. The visual codes of secrecy, evident through the content and form of photographic images, exist as a nuanced means of social communication. I write about how social secrecy regarding death translates into the visual image. I have isolated social issues of taboos around the representation of the dead in contemporary western culture to explore the dynamics of cultural secrecy.

My argument is that photography is the most appropriate form of artistic visual expression because of its links to truthfulness and revelation. It allows a fresh perspective on secrecy through the analysis of images from the difficult genre of postmortem photographs by artists such as Jeffrey Silverthorne, Sue Fox and Andre Serrano. The thesis exposes the concealment/revelation paradox indexical of secrecy. I focus in particular on the photographic treatment of the dead body by artists Sebastião Salgado and Joel Peter Witkin, referencing their work in relation to projective identification. Some of the images of the corpse in my thesis are disturbing and confronting - my argument identifies some of the reasons this is so. This study breaks apart collusive patterns of thinking which adhere around the photographic codes of secrecy.