University Day

Today the University celebrates its eighth anniversary.

"Technological Change" is the subject of the University Day Address to be given in Pentagon 1 at 6 p.m. by Dr. W.J. McG. Tegart, the Secretary of the Commonwealth Department of Science and Technology.

The Address will be followed at 7 p.m. by the 2nd Graduates Reunion Dinner in the Union Hall. The 2nd reunion will emphasize the 1979 and 1980 graduating classes. Tickets are $14 each for a magnificent smorgasbord, wine and entertainment by Theatre South. Music is courtesy of Scott Jackson and Jurjens Pianos and Organ. Tickets are still available at the Union for those who are interested in our birthday.

EMINENT SHAKESPEARE SCHOLAR VISITS CAMPUS

Professor J.L. Styan, Professor of English, Northwestern University, Chicago, recently visited the University to conduct a one-day seminar/workshop entitled "Sight and Space: the Perception of Shakespeare on Stage".

Over 40 students of Literature and Drama attended and obviously found Professor Styan's approach to understanding Shakespeare's stagecraft fresh and informative.

He involved participants in acted readings of selected scenes from particular plays to point out the ways in which Shakespeare exploited the spatial dimensions of the Elizabethan stage. Specifically, he showed the ways in which the performance space and the actor/audience relationship of the Globe Theatre affected Shakespeare's dramatic writing and how these factors can affect production and interpretation of the plays.

He stressed the need to take the plays off the page and onto the stage, where, he stated, "they belong and where they are best studied."

Professor Styan, the author of many books and articles on drama and theatre (the Dramatic Experience, the Dark Comedy, Max Rheinhasdt) has been in Australia for several months as Kathleen Robinson, Lecturer in Drama at Sydney University.

During his visits he also has given details of a project in which he is involved: the building of a replica of the Globe Theatre close to the site of the original on London's Southbank.

Professor Styan said that "it will be as close as we can make it, in layout and materials, to the theatre in which Shakespeare worked, according to the best information provided by theatre scholars and archaeologists."

He went on to say that "It will be on one hand, a 'working theatre' available to theatrical professionals from all over the world, so that they can discover how Shakespearean drama might have looked and sounded in the venue for which it was intended."

Further, he said that it was to serve also as a resource for educational purposes, one that would benefit all scholars and students of Shakespearean drama, "not as a museum, but as a living, dynamic contribution to the understanding of theatrical practice."

As a $35 million project, he added, raising the funds will be a problem in these difficult times, "But with nearly $10m. already raised, Prince Phillip as Patron and the Queen contributing oak-trees from Windsor Forest for its construction, we've made a good start."

He hopes Australians will show active interest in the project, first in terms of practical support and eventually in the use of a facility which will belong to the whole world.

(For further information on this project, contact Maurie Scott, Department of English Literature and Drama).

JAYCEES TRIUMPHANT

Wollongong Jaycees won the Illawarra Mercury Cup and the National Australia Bank Travel Prize on Saturday, 6 August. The debate with Junior Council (representing schools) was very close, the adjudicators ruling 5 to 2 in favour of Jaycees.

The topic was "Australian Education is a Success" and Jaycees were defending the negative position.

The winning team, Michael Graham, Donna Reilly and Geoff Lochland each received a 15 day Aussie Pass on Ansett Pioneer, courtesy of National Australia Bank Travel.
DANCE WEEK

Four students from the School of Education will represent the Institute during Dance Education week. There will be a display of Creative Dance in Martin Place on August 24, in which Helen Titus, Rex Roberts, Paul Goodwin and Julie McCormack will present a dance sequence to music by the group 'Machinations'. All four are students in the Bachelor of Education course at the Institute. Helen is the only student with prior experience in dance and is largely responsible for the venture. Congratulations to all four for their selection.

CONTAINER TERMINALS RESEARCH

Dr. Ross Robinson, Reader in the Department of Geography, has just completed the first major study of container terminal operations and productivity in the port of Sydney (and in fact the first such Australian study).

The study was commissioned by the Bureau of Transport Economics in Canberra and was carried out over a period of six months. The report "Container terminal productivity in Port Jackson: a background study of Glebe Island and Seattainer Terminals 1977-1981" is still classified but it is expected to appear in due course as an Occasional Paper within a series published by the Bureau of Transport Economics.

The study examined the progressive development of container facilities in Port Jackson and later in Port Botany in response to the growing demand for containerisation. It analysed in some detail from confidential records for the two terminals over the period 1977 to 1981 aspects of vessel and terminal productivity - ship turnaround time, labour availability, container exchange rates, delay times, berth occupancy, equipment downtime etc.

The study is expected to be part of an ongoing programme of research into containerisation being developed by the Bureau of Transport Economics.

UNIVERSITY OF WOLLONGONG APPLICATIONS

The closing date for applications for entry to undergraduate study at the University is now October 1.

MEDIATORS NEEDED

Wollongong Community Justice Centre needs more mediators.

Community Justice Centres have been set up by the New South Wales Government to provide mediation services to people involved in personal disputes.

Knowledge of English is essential for mediators, and knowledge of another language is highly desirable.

No other special educational qualifications are needed.

If you are tolerant, understanding, a good listener, have common sense, and are looking for a satisfying and challenging interest, we would like you to contact:

Wollongong Community Justice Centre (280433)
Office 23, 157 Crown Street, Wollongong.

Two training courses, to be conducted by Wollongong Technical College, will begin in mid-September. One course is intended for people available during the day, the other for those not able to attend during business hours.

It is envisaged that both courses will consist of one four hour session per week for twelve weeks and Saturday 6 hour session.

Those who successfully complete the course will be eligible for appointment as Mediators. Mediators are employed on a casual basis and currently are paid at the rate of $9.00 per hour.

RURAL EDUCATION

Each year, in support of a rural educational enterprise, members of the university staff have generously contributed children's books, no longer needed, for distribution to homes where the printed work is perhaps not as commonplace as it is in most of ours. Anyone having such books to spare may leave them with Dr. de Lacey, Department of Education, and they will be taken or forwarded to Bourke.

ACADEMY OF SCIENCE

"Publications in Print", from the Australian Academy of Science, is on display on the Campus News noticeboard in the Hut.

CTEC GUIDELINES

The Commonwealth Tertiary Education Commission has issued guidelines on educational objectives and funding in the coming triennium.

W.E.A. SEEKS TUTORS

The Workers' Educational Association is a voluntary association of representatives of classes, groups, clubs and affiliated organisations and of individual members. These people are united to promote and provide liberal adult education through the study of subjects, especially the humanities.

The W.E.A. provides adult education which is non-vocational and non-credit; that is, its courses do not require any previous educational standard to have been reached, there are no examinations and therefore no qualifications awarded. Students join these courses because they have a general desire to know and understand. The W.E.A. believes that there are many people in the community who want to study in this way without embarking on degree or diploma courses at universities or other tertiary institutions. It also believes that it is vital that citizens in a participatory democracy should make intelligent and informed use of their power.

The current programme of W.E.A. tutorials conducted in Wollongong is diminutive when balanced with the enormous physical and human resources available at the University.

Tutorials may satisfy many needs by:

* Creating greater community involvement in the university.
* Sharing of resources, not available outside the university.
* Providing a broader educational programme of introductory short courses.
* Allowing students to experience a variety of subject areas before making a commitment to a degree/diploma course.
* Introducing many potential full-time students to the university environment.
* Providing part-time employment for lecturers.

Should you wish to design and present a tutorial class at the University please contact Greg Frawley, Regional Secretary, Workers' Educational Association, 97 Corrimal Street, Wollongong - Telephone 287088.

Concerts, Exhibitions and Entertainment

MUSICA VIVA

Musica Viva presents “Sirocco”, a group of four versatile and experienced musicians who combine ancient and modern instruments (they play a huge range of different instruments) to play songs and dances from countries such as France, Bulgaria, Greece, Turkey, Ireland, the British Isles and Australia.

The music and lyrics are collected, adapted, arranged and sometimes written by members of the group, which has been together since 1980. The traditions and style of playing spring from our indigenous bush music inspired by Anglo-Irish immigrants to include the folk music of the many other cultures brought to Australia through today’s immigrants.

NUCLEAR DISARMAMENT by Tony Hulbert

The Wollongong University Nuclear Disarmament Association will be addressed by Mr. Eugene Lumbers of Mollymook on 18 August 1983 at 12.30 p.m. in the Northern Lounge of the University Union.

The Speaker: Eugene Lumbers is a freelance writer who recalls with regret that when the first atom bomb was dropped on Hiroshima there was general rejoicing at the radio station where he was a news editor. “We thought that World War 2 was ended. Not only that but we thought that all war had come to an end.” “We were wrong on both counts. World War 2 had not ended; another bomb was dropped on Nagasaki on August 9 but it still did not end. The Russians declared war on the Japanese on August 8 and the Japanese fought Japanese on August 8 and the Japanese fought and mis-trust was assiduously created and has dominated the international political scene to this day”.

“I was one of the many writers of fiction who earned cigarette money by exploiting nuclear themes in the early fifties when pollution of the air with suspicion was getting under way. My first effort was a radio serial about a South American dictatorship harbouring nazi scientists while they worked on an ultimate nuclear weapon. My second concerned a group of military types whose arrogance in conducting a carelessly managed nuclear explosion produced a giant mutant pig which turned cannibal and ate them. It was called ‘Big Pig’.

My third was a doomsday theme of yet another nuclear test that went wrong and set off a chain reaction which unravelled the universe ending in a glorious cascade of gushing torrents of galaxies.

‘Big Pig’ evoked an interesting response. Apart from those who rang or wrote the station wanting to know if it was true and asking for details there were others who in congratulating us on an enjoyable story expressed their concern for world peace.

Spontaneous expressions against nuclear war have been around for a long time.”

The Argument: The increasing danger of nuclear war will be lessened by an agreement to reduce nuclear weaponry and will be removed altogether by an agreement to abolish these weapons.

Any agreement calls for mutual trust between the parties to it but there are many in the west who are persuaded to believe that the Soviet Union will not honour an arms limitation of any kind let alone one on nuclear weapons.

They claim, therefore, that no genuine arrangement is possible.

There are, at the other extreme, those who believe that The Soviet Union’s continual call for nuclear disarmament is honest, and that, in fact, together with the whole Eastern block it is the most committed of all aligned powers to the maintenance of world peace through disarmament.

In the middle of these opposites are millions desperately anxious about the future and earnestly desiring peace but persuaded by a continual stream of media information that any pledge will be broken by the Soviet Union which will then launch a surprise nuclear attack on a world powerless to retaliate.

To reassure them the speaker will draw on data from Soviet Foreign Policy statements since 1918, the writings of western observers over 65 years and other sources, to help document the generalisation:

“That the Soviet Union is genuine in its declared policy of disarmament and can therefore be trusted to honour a disarmament pact.”
